Films are being made in many Canadian cities: Why should not Prince Rupert get her local industries featured in the movies. It might be worth doing, but not in winter.

Mary Pickford is said to be at the peak of her remarkable career in "Tess."

Booth Tarkington's story "The Flirt," done into a picture without the aid of any outstanding star is said to be one of the seven best January films.

Bohemian life may be seen in "The Face on the Bar Room Floor," in which Jack Pickford is the central figure.

In France the government has taxed the movies all the way from 16 to 50 per cent and as a result 300 cinema houses are closed down. That is the way not to do it.

Arnieke did not come back after all. There is still hope for the world.

Pearl White is still doing wonderful and awful stunts. It is said that her new serial "Plunder" is the most thrilling yet.

THEY MARRY THEN WHAT?

Maurice Tourneur's "Foolish Matrons" is an Unusual Picture

This story concerns three women who constitute a molecule of social New York. Each belongs to a separate household. Each works out her own destiny; yet each reacts on the other. There is the woman who, possessing youth, beauty and other polite accomplishments, yet finds herself in an environment that cramps and dwarfs her personality—the woman who too often marries in order to find the social opportunity that is otherwise denied her. She thinks that she loves the man whom she marries; but really what she loves are the pleasures, innocent or not, to which marriage is the open door. Such a woman need not be, like Georgina Wayne, actually hampered by living in a small town. It is, after all, nothing but the great god Respectability which keeps her from following in the footsteps of her more "brazen" sister who gets what she wants without the formality of marriage.

Cold and Selfish

There is the woman cold and selfish, to whom marriage is little more than membership in a club to which one ought to belong because it is the thing to do. Such women need not be like Sheila Hopkins, a newspaper reporter; she may not be seeking fame as a writer. It is necessary only that she love herself more than anything in the world.

Lastly, there is the woman, who unblushingly acknowledges "If I ever find my man I will use every art I know to get him—and keep him"—the woman who considers that the secret of happiness for her is to make some man happy. Some people believe that this type of woman is out of date. They call her "old-fashioned." But secretly they envy her, whether she be a celebrated actress like Annis Grand or just plain Mrs. Smith next door.

Noble Woman

The story of Annis Grand is the story of a noble woman who has achieved success on the stage, yet who, through all the years of hard work, has never lost her ideal of complete self-expression. Through accident, she meets Dr. Ian Fraser, a distinguished surgeon, to whose hospital the actress is carried after her automobile has been wrecked in a collision with a street car.

Annis' first anxiety concerns her face. The doctor, deeming her another of the shallow society beauties whose uselessness he despises, answers roughly that her face is all right. But when he learns that she is an actress and that her face is her

"bread and butter," as she says, he treats her more gently and soon becomes interested in her.

They Marry

Annis learns from the nurse that the doctor has two sides of his character; that he is capable of charging a wealthy pawnbroker $10,000 for an operation, while from a poor washer-woman he refuses to take any fee for curing her crippled child.

Ian, on his side, is interested in this woman who does things. At the earliest opportunity he asks her to marry him, blissfully unconscious of how deliberately she has led him on to the proposal.

They marry and then what? The picture tells it, at the Westholme tonight and tomorrow.

VIOLA DANA IN GAYEST COMEDY

In "Glass Houses," her latest production Viola Dana has to portray the role of Joy Duval, who, on her wedding day, finds that her husband, Billy Norton, believes her to be a notorious crook. He tries to persuade her to give up her life of crime, but she thinks that he has gone mad and tries to soothe him.

They are to be guests at a ball in the hotel Kenilworth, but Billy, still believing that his wife is the notorious Angel Face Ann, sees a picture of Swag Sullivan, the con woman's husband, who is in prison. Billy goes to him and there learns that Angel Face Ann has planned a big killing at the ball. Billy rushes to the hotel and upon finding Joy insists on saving her from the police. While she is trying to get him home so that she can have him examined as to his mental condition, the real Angel Face Ann comes on the scene.

Viola Dana enacts the principal role in this, her gayest, comedy of adventure and hilarious complications.

GREAT SCENES IN BIG PLAY AT WEEK END

Manslaughter Deals With Reckless Driving of Autos

In spite of the fact that there were no photographers to record the dress and costumes of the masses during the years of the decadence of the Roman Empire, Cecil B. DeMille has faithfully reproduced a scene of the barbarian invasion of Rome in his latest Paramount picture, "Manslaughter," which is being enthusiastically received all over the country.

The episode alluded to is a brief historical cutback, but it depicts vividly the arrival of Alaric's hordes in the Eternal City.

Beatrice Joy, who is one of the principals of the modern portion of the story, is the hostess at a lavishly beautiful Roman bacchanal which is interrupted by Thomas Meighan in the role of the leader of the Goths, Lois Wilson, John Millern and Casson Ferguson are the other members of the notable cast appearing in this sequence.

A strikingly realistic gladiatorial combat is one of the many interesting features of the bacchanalian entertainment. Although the episode required more than a week to film and kept nearly 1,000 persons employed, it will occupy the screen for only a few minutes. It is used to point a powerful lesson and serves to draw a comparison between the ancient Rome and modern America.

B.C. FURS SELLING WELL AT EDMONTON

Vancouver Market Being Displaced For Peltries Says Bulletin Report

Edmonton as a purchasing point for central B.C. furs is rapidly displacing Vancouver, say local fur-men who illustrate this by indicating recent peltries shipped here for sale from the other side of the mountains, one of the best packs of British Columbia furs having been sold at the Northern Trading Company's warehouse says the Edmonton Bulletin.

This shipment sold for $3,000 and is regarded as a sign of the times. Prices for raw furs are as good in Edmonton as any part of the

How often can We Advertise?

NOT How often should we Advertise?

WHY are the Canadian and American Manufacturers appropriating fifty per cent more dollars in Newspaper Advertising for the year 1923 than in 1922?

There's a Reason

BECAUSE they have implicit faith in the pulling power of Newspaper Advertising and in the future trade conditions for the coming year.

The daily newspaper has proved itself worthy of this tremendous responsibility and trust.

Men who spend millions of dollars on Newspaper Advertising yearly know what it has done for them in the past and feel safe in trusting their future fortunes to the advertising columns of the daily press.
