Praise from the Country

Commendation from a woman who spent most of her life in the country is praise indeed, for to such cooks, cream has not been a luxury, but a necessity.

Mrs. Eleanor Rue "was raised" on a farm in Pennsylvania. She married a Canadian and came to British Columbia. Cream was such a price they could not afford it, like when she lived in the country. "We tried different canned milks until we found Pacific and I really like it better than cream now. I never made such cakes before."

The experience of Mrs. Rue is common to many others. Pacific does work better in cooking, for it is always of the same richness.
