Everyone Pleased With Message.

Everyone here was pleased with the message brought by Sir Henry Thornton. They were cheered and now they look forward to the future with renewed hope. They felt that the president of the railway was not only sincere, but that he also had the power to do that which he desired. They knew that he was backed up by the Dominion Government and that anything he set himself to accomplish he would likely carry through. The message of cheer will carry us through many a difficult situation and will tend to make us unite our efforts with one end, that of making this a real city.

President Careful Not To Over Promise.

President Thornton was careful not to promise more than he felt he could perform. He is a careful man and his record indicates that while he says things well, he does them even better than he says them. So we expect it will be here. We shall look forward with anticipation of improvements, gradual but steady, and we shall be glad to co-operate in aiding the railway to carry out the projects they have in hand.

End Of Group Government In Ontario.

Group government has come to an end in Ontario for the present and few people will regret it. It was not a success. It made for extravagance and sectionalism. While party government is often anything but ideal it was found that class government was worse.

One of the chief sins of the Drury Government was its extravagance. They spent money and caused the taxes to mount at a terrific rate. Also they aroused antagonism by the manner in which they enforced the liquor laws.

All parties in Ontario are prohibition parties. All promised to enforce the present law but there was a difference of opinion as to methods. While it is possible the new government may again give the people there a right to vote on the liquor question, they are not in any measure anti-prohibitionist, at any rate so far as the public utterances of the leaders are concerned.

The present setback to the farmer-labor coalition in Ontario will prove a setback to group government everywhere because Ontario is one of the few places that has tried it. It proved a failure, apparently, and other provinces of Canada will hesitate before making a similar mistake. It is always a mistake to think that a man can be taken from between the handles of a plow and set to conduct so large a business as a provincial government. Be he ever so able he has to learn his trade before he can practice it.

Will Give Hope To Local Conservatives.

The result of the election in Ontario will give hope to local Conservatives. It shows that the electorate is always liable to change and to do most unexpected things. It matters not whether it be in the city, the province or the Dominion, changes are liable to come at any time, as come they have before. People are very fickle. Also they are very forgetful. They forget the sins of the past and they no longer remember services rendered. They are accused of being ungrateful. Possibly the result in Ontario may be a lesson to other governments to refuse to play fast and loose with public funds and thus save themselves from a similar fate.

FRESH STATEMENT ON ESSENCE OF CHRISTIANITY IN ADDRESS BY ARCHBISHOP TO SYNOD TODAY.

scientific method of relating spiritual truths to the lives of men, women, and children, according to their age, sex, and race. Religion can now become a reality to all sorts and conditions of people, whereas before it was generally supposed that only the favored few of a mystical temperament could ever become the saints of God.

Modernized Gospel

If the Church is to gain and not suffer from the onward march of knowledge, we who minister must keep abreast of the times. The atmosphere of thought in which we live today is entirely different to that of the middle ages. The language of scholasticism in which much of the theology of the Church was formulated is rapidly becoming an unknown tongue. The truth of the Everlasting Gospel needs to be proclaimed in terms of modern thought.

In our methods of religion while we should be very slow to abandon customs hallowed by centuries of use, yet where these customs are steadily losing their hold it is wise to carefully modify them to better adapt them to present conditions. There is nothing sacred about the hours of eleven and seven for church services. In northern latitudes we must study what is best; not be slaves to church fashion. While the craze for brevity may be carried too far, I am convinced that there is too much reading and speaking in our church services and not enough time allowed for quiet meditation. Concentration of mind is necessary to efficacy in prayer. Shakespeare taught us this when he made the king of Denmark say:—

"My words fly up, my thoughts remain below, Words without thoughts never to heaven go."

Optimal Pause

We are so constituted that we cannot concentrate our minds for very long at a stretch. The time is coming when we shall have "the optimal pause" interspersed at intervals throughout our services. "Be still and know that I am God."

As to preaching it is appalling to think of the amount of oratorical effort that is apparently wasted every Sunday throughout the country because a better use is not made of the supreme law of the subconscious mind whereby an idea on the surface of the mind is made an energy in the depths of the soul. While we should earnestly pray that the Spirit of God may graft the words which we hear with our outward ears inwardly in our hearts, we should at the same time understand the psychological process whereby this is done.

It thrills us with hope for the transformation of character and the uplifting of humanity when we see that the Divine Spirit never fails to work in accordance with the natural laws of the human mind, which we are beginning to understand.

An Intuitive Act

A touching incident occurred at our last Synod two years ago. We had just carried by a standing vote a resolution of sympathy moved by Archdeacon Collison to the family of the late Rev. J. B. McCullagh when by a flash of intuitive insight I realized that we should never have our beloved Archdeacon with us at Synod again, so while he stood on the platform beside me I offered him, with deep emotion the tribute of our united esteem and affectionate regard. I am thankful that we did this while he was still with us. The memory and the spirit of this grand veteran of the Cross who spent forty-eight years of service among the Indians of this coast should always be an inspiration to this diocese.

We are glad to have his book entitled "In the Wake of the War Canoe." We are also glad to have the book written by a sympathetic friend entitled "McCullagh of Aiyansh." The story of thirty-eight years of faithful work both on the lower and also on the upper Naas River is now amongst the annals of history. Perhaps some of the younger men who are doing good missionary work in the pioneer districts of this vast diocese do not realize that they also are making history in laying the foundations of righteousness and goodness upon which will be built a law-abiding, industrious, and happy community.

Externals of Religion

There is much to discourage us in this western country in the way of apparent indifference to religion but this indifference has largely to do with the externals of religion. The men of the west want reality in religion and wherever they find this they respect it. There is more scientific reading and deep thinking done among the prospectors, the miners, the loggers, the fishermen, and the settlers of this wild rugged mountainous country than is done among the fashionable congregations of eastern cities. And so even in regard to this missionary diocese with its trying problems of scattered missions and inadequate support I do not hesitate to say that the outlook for spiritual religion is full of promise and bright with hope. The Spirit of Christ will yet conquer the world. Our God is marching on, because He is working in us.

HOMESTAKE MINE TO OPERATE THIS SEASON

Men Already at Work on Property, Kitsault River, Alice Arm

ALICE ARM, June 27.—Major R. F. Crichton, of Vancouver, arrived in camp Thursday with a small crew of men, and will begin active development on the Homestake group of claims, located 26 miles up the Kitsault River, near the Kitsault Glacier. More men will be put on as the work develops.

Mr. Crichton was mine foreman when work was closed down on the property in the Fall of 1921. Since then no work has been done.

At the time of closing down 170 feet of tunnel work had been done. No. 1 tunnel striking the vein at a distance of 123 feet.

The present operations will consist of cutting the vein in No. 1 tunnel; and the extension of No. 2 tunnel, and of proving up and developing the mine.

This property has a nice surface lead, from 35 to 40 feet in width, carrying pyrite, chalcopyrite and galena.

The Homestake Group consists of four claims and is under bond from A. Davidson and associates to the Consolidated Homestake Mining and Development Co. of Vancouver.
