Deplorable Ignorance

CAPT. HENRY SLAYTON, who drove into Prince Rupert last night to win a medal as the first motorist to drive from Florida to this city, is not the first to tell of Canadian customs officers at the British Columbia border advising motor tourists, no doubt through sheer and deplorable, if not inexcusable, ignorance, that there was no highway open to Terrace and Prince Rupert. How such officials should not yet know the northern transprovincial highway leading to the coast here is open seems almost unbelievable but it seems, nevertheless, true. For instance Mr. and Mrs. Farnsworth, recent settlers at Terrace from Nevada, were similarly misadvised and, like Captain Slayton, almost abandoned the trip. The Associated Boards of Trade of Central British Columbia and other organizations were well advised in making vigorous protest to the appropriate government authorities and it is hoped the protests will have immediate effect. Certainly, government officials, particularly those having to do with immigration, should be the last to be so ill informed about their own country and its vital travel facilities.

KEEPING UP TO DATE

WHETHER WE ARE READY to admit it or not, this has become an age of internationalism. No longer is it sufficient for a citizen merely to keep up with happenings in his own community, his own province or even his own country. In this fast-moving period a development in a country or city thousands of miles away can affect a Canadian community.

The last war emphasized to Canadians that the time has passed when they could think of their country as a land isolated and protected by vast oceans on either coast. Events in Asia and in Europe were interlocked with the destiny of the Dominion. The end of war left Canada with new and lasting responsibilities in helping to make and keep the peace.

The citizen shares those responsibilities because his representatives in parliament can carry out programs and policies only to the extent they are backed by the people of Canada.

Where can the facts be found that will enable a Canadian to express a thoughtful, well-informed opinion on an issue of national importance? To what source can he turn for background information on an international development?

Special departments of newspapers are one help—special commentaries by news analysts, interpretative articles by correspondents and other expressions of expert opinion. Magazines contain many worthwhile articles written from the Canadian viewpoint. Practically every library has timely books on current affairs.

An atlas or a globe kept near the easy chair often clarifies a news story or article. Reference libraries make available material for a debate or discussion and reports of surveys and similar activities can be obtained.

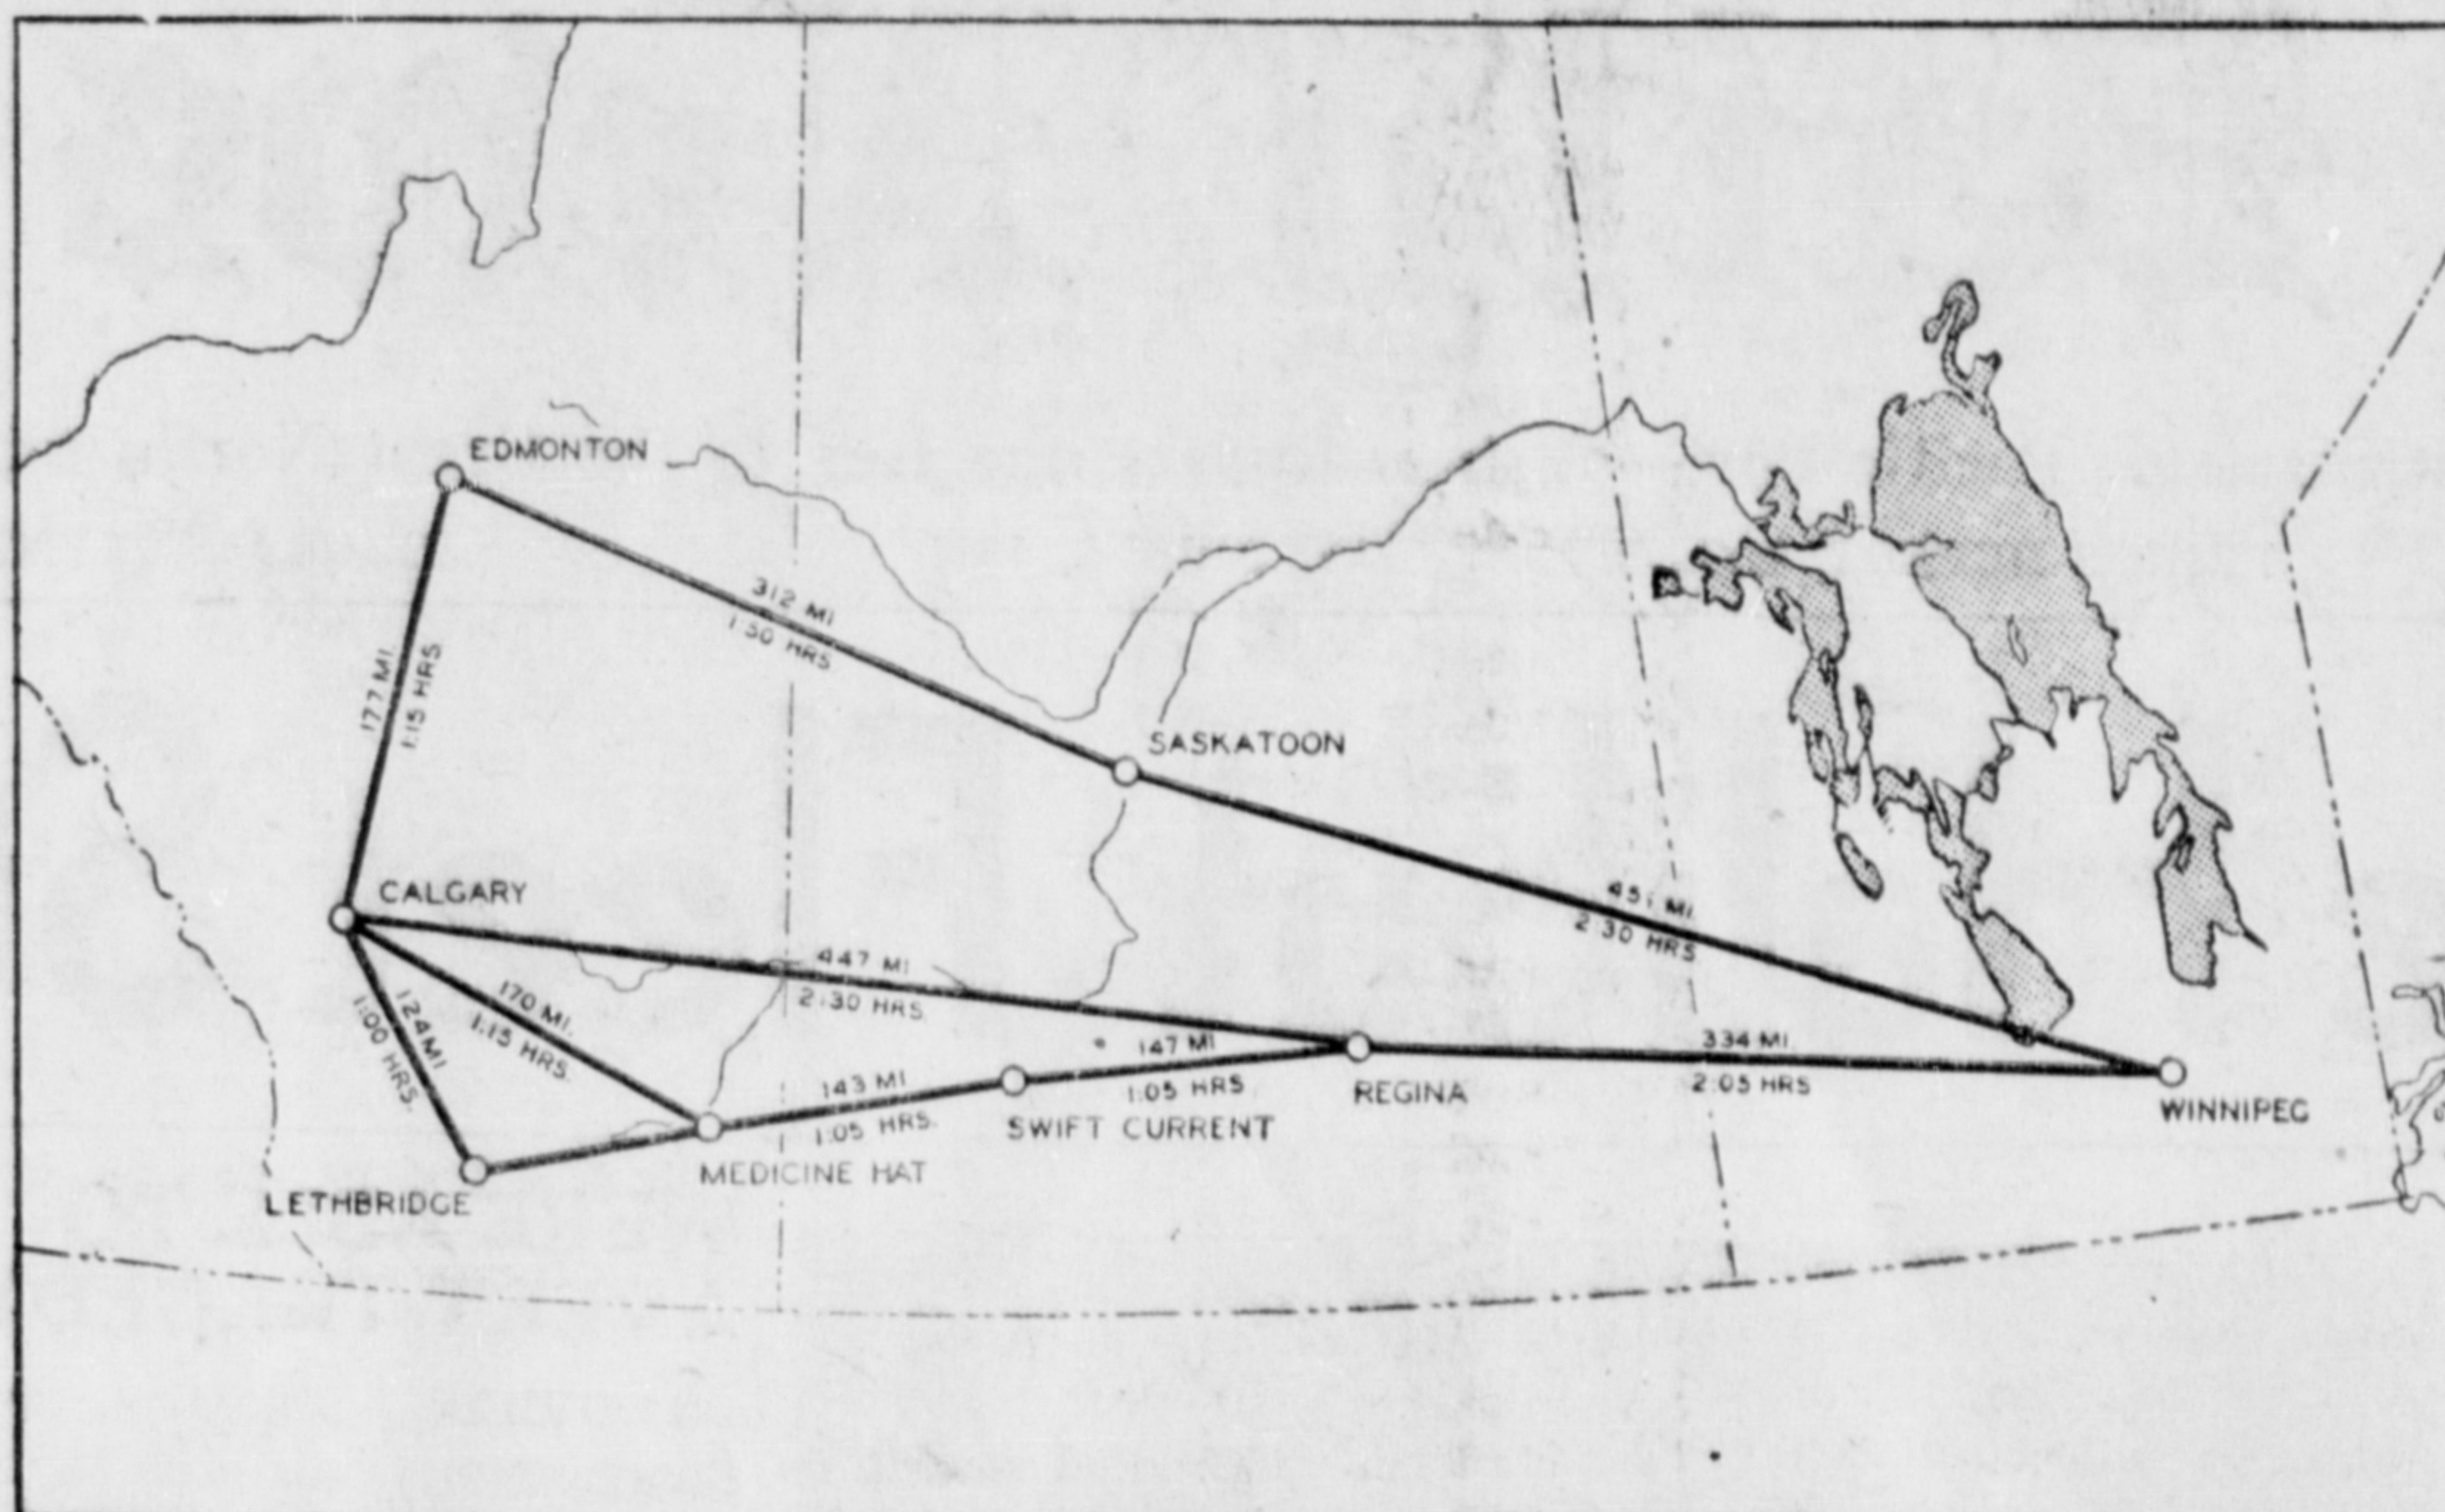

Keeping up to date needn't be dry or dull. It can provide an interesting way of broadening one's horizons, making new friends and gaining satisfaction from being in step with events.

Being informed and alert is more than the duty of a good citizen. It can safeguard liberty itself.

Mr. and Mrs. James Bremner and small daughter returned on the Prince Rupert this morning from Ocean Falls, where Mr. Bremner has spent the last few months doing plastering work on construction projects.

Stanley Cameron, Standard Oil Co. representative, returned this morning on the Prince Rupert from a business trip during which he attended a company conference at San Francisco. He was in the south two weeks.

AIRLINE NETWORK LOOPS PRAIRIES

With the inauguration of service July 1 over the 763-mile airway direct from Winnipeg to Edmonton, passing through Saskatoon, Trans-Canada Air Lines expands its prairie network to throw a 1,700 mile loop of air service around the principal western centres and brings them closer than ever before in point of time. Medicine Hat, Swift Current and Saskatoon become new T.C.A. stops that day. The map shows how distances across the three provinces have been collapsed in terms of travelling time.

MALE STEWARDS ON AIR LINES

Men Replacing Girls On Winnipeg-Calgary Run

WINNIPEG—TransCanada Air Lines has graduated its first class of male stewards. Eight ex-servicemen replace the girls on this flight which call at Regina, Swift Current and Medicine Hat to afford a local service across the southern prairies. Some of the men will ultimately be in T.C.A.'s over-ocean services.

To show there is no hard feelings between the sexes the eight boys took their instructress out to dinner Saturday night. She was Stewardess Florence Perkins of Winnipeg and Estevan, Sask.

GOODS ARE FREER NOW

Local Business Man Sees Wholesale and Retail Markets Getting Back to Normal

Business is rapidly getting back to pre-war normal says L. M. Felsenthal, local businessman, who returned to the city at the end of last week from a periodical business trip to Montreal, Toronto, and Vancouver. The market both wholesale and retail, is turning from that of the seller to that of the buyer. Contrary to the condition which existed even three months ago, Mr. Felsenthal reported that he was able to buy freely of almost all lines and to have deliveries insured too. "The picture has become altogether different," he observed. "Buyers are able to choose now whereas only a few months ago they were still having to take what they could get." Lifting of controls is one contributing factor to the new condition, Mr. Felsenthal believes.
