The christian man must not be one who looks upon his salvation simply as an eternal life insurance policy against the future; but as saving him from sin, to a vital fellowship with the Father through Christ, and the making of him into a servant of the Master, who was Himself a worker. Chrisitans should always be happy to be known as ser vants. There is plenty to do, and friend, it must be done.

But, of course, it was. How the stupendous job was started and carried through is told by Bob Considine in this book.

Brave and brilliant men gav their courage and talents building the canal. Yet these men differed in many ways.

Among them were these five: the proud De Lesseps, who had built the Suez Canal for France; his loyal and wise son. Charles the fiery-tempered Theodor Roosevelt, in whose term United States took over building of the canal; the industrious Gorgas, who defeated the diseases that made a to Panama a risky business; and the great army engineer Goethals, who completed the work.
