Calgary Stampede Buys Brahma Bulls

CALGARY (CP)—The Calgary exhibition and stampede this year changed usual procedure to prevent the foot-and-mouth disease outbreak in Saskatchewan and the resulting United States livestock embargo from interfering with one of its top drawing cards.

The stampede decided to buy the Brahma bulls used in the bull-riding event instead of renting them for the annual show, which starts July 7.

It purchased 22 head of Brahma bulls from J. V. Ring in Washington State. The bulls were wintered on the ranch of arena director Dick Cosgrave at Rosebury, Alta., where the bucking horses also were fitted for the 1952 show.

Because of regulations forbidding entry to cattle from Canada into the United States, the stampede board was forced to cancel a contract which it held with Verne Elliott of Texas for use of his Brahma bulls at the stampede. While the Elliott Brahmas could have come to Canada, they would not have been allowed to return.

The J. V. Ring bulls were used last year at the Edmonton and Medicine Hat rodeos and proved to be top-flight material.

Red Spy Leaders Seek Aggrieved; Easy Victims

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

Associated Press News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—What accounts for the startling success of the Stalinist fifth column? How are its recruits, often highly intelligent and educated persons, persuaded to join an underground conspiracy against their own countries?

The recruitment of the fifth column often requires money, but money is secondary. Few of the cases of convicted Communist spies involved the payment of any large amount of money. One of the most important methods of recruiting for Stalin's secret army is the Communist cell.

Communists scout carefully for their prospects—persons whose way of thinking indicates the possibility of persuasion. Those persons are not invited into the Communist party itself. Instead they become subjects for what the Communists call "development."

Prospects are lured into "study groups" or "discussion groups," which in reality are operated by cells of the Communist party. The recruiting agents concentrate on scientific workers, teachers, students and persons engaged in intellectual pursuits—in particular likely prospects who either work for the government or have a chance of doing so. Wherever possible, these persons are caught young.

Persons with grievances—who consider themselves or their race or their creed to be persecuted—are singled out for special attention and often become easy victims. Disillusionment hits these people hard when it comes.

"I consider myself a second-class Canadian, not a first-class Canadian," testified one agent in the Canadian spy case. "That is not a laughing matter, Mr. Commissioner. It is serious."

Thus Dr. Alan Nunn May, caught up in the Soviet spy network in Canada, pleaded in court in Britain: "I did it for the good of mankind."

For Fuchs and May, it was a matter of persuading themselves that they were working for the good of humanity under a system of life which had made fanatics of them. Money was secondary.

STUDY GROUPS
In the study groups, the "student" must be imbued with the idea that in working for Moscow he is working for humanity.

Once the cells have completed the basic program of "development" with their prospective fifth columnists, the second stage is reached. That brings a transfer of loyalty to the Soviet Union, blind obedience to the party, devotion to the "cause."

The prospect still believes he is working for mankind, but now the good of mankind and the Soviet Union are becoming synonymous.

BLACKWOOD on Bridge

Holdup Play Can Cause Loss of Game

While this hand was being dealt, Mr. Heinsite was giving Mr. Muzzy a free lecture on the subject of the holdup play. He thought it was free, anyway. Actually, it cost him plenty.

He pointed out the advantage of refusing to win until one opponent had been exhausted of the lead suit, in order to cut communications between the defenders' hands. For a change, Mr. Muzzy listened attentively. This was not good.

Against today's three no trump bid, Mr. Dale led the deuce of hearts. Now, Mr. Muzzy could have made his contract by winning with the ace and promptly taking a club finesse. The finesse would have lost and the defenders could then have won three heart tricks. But that would have been all. Mr. Muzzy would have had the rest.

However, the play did not go like that. When he saw the opening lead and the dummy, Mr. Muzzy said to himself, "This is it! The holdup play." He let Mrs. Keen win with the 10 of hearts over dummy's trey.

Believing her partner to have only four hearts, Mrs. Keen realized the hand could not be defeated in the heart suit alone.

She, therefore, shifted to the four of diamonds.

Mr. Muzzy played the six of hearts. "No diamonds, partner?" snapped Mr. Heinsite.

Mr. Muzzy looked confused. "Who led a diamond?" he asked. "I did," answered Mrs. Keen.

Mr. Muzzy didn't like this at all. He had expected a heart return. He had the air of a man who thinks he has been cheated. He picked up the heart and played a low diamond.

Well, if it's good to duck in one suit, it must be twice as good to duck in two suits. So Mr. Muzzy let Mr. Dale's 10 of diamonds hold. On came the jack of diamonds and it, too, won.

Mr. Dale then went back to hearts and Mr. Muzzy, apparently fearing the opponents would make a slam if he didn't step in soon, won with the ace.

He finessed clubs, losing to the king, and the defenders then took two more heart tricks—down too.
