'Fearless Fagan' New Animal Star

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD—Comes now M.G.M.'s answer to Francis the talking mule—Fearless Fagan, the wandering lion.

Unless Hollywood tradition reverses itself, that means you'll be seeing pictures with such titles as these:

"Fearless Fagan in Africa," "Fearless Fagan Takes a Mate" and, of course, "Son of Fearless Fagan."

There is no better or more consistent, moneymaker in the business than a series picture with an animal star, Lassie, Rin Tin Tin and now Francis are top examples. Universal International, the trade reports say, uses Francis to pay off the studio overhead.

M.G.M. press-reviewed "Fearless Fagan" the other day and introduced Pte. Floyd Humeston, the real-life owner of Fagan. Although Carleton Carpenter and Janet Leigh were co-starred, it was Fagan's picture. One critic quipped that he would give it a "Four Roar" rating. Another called Fagan the movie's best grunter since the late Wallace Beery.

But surest sign that the studio is going to give Fagan the buildup is the news that Sidney Franklin, Jr., has been raised to producer status.

Young Franklin, until Fagan came along, had only been an assistant to producer Gottfried Reinhardt.

Although Fagan is 410 pounds of bonafide lion, he somehow acts like an overgrown kitten around Humeston. The soldier raised the beast from the time it was four days old. He spends every furlough away from Fort Ord with Fagan.

M.G.M. paid $10,000 for the Fearless Fagan story. Humeston got one-third but he said he considered the money of minor importance. The fact that Fagan has a good home at M.G.M. is what's really important.

"The very least I could do for that lion is give it a good home," says Franklin. "Look what he's done for me. He only needs 16 pounds of horsemeat a day. What other M.G.M. star works that cheap?"

Special to The Daily News

VANCOUVER — Glen W. McPherson, Vancouver management and financial authority, has been named executive vice-president and secretary-treasurer of the Okanagan Air Services Ltd., one of the world's largest helicopter operators.

His appointment was announced today by board chairman Douglas Dewar. New directors are Air Vice-Marshal L. F. Stevens and J. J. West, both of Vancouver.

Immediately prior to taking his new post, Mr. McPherson was assistant to the vice-president and managing director of Alaska Pine and Cellulose Limited.

Widely-known in Canadian business circles, he was manager of the Vancouver investment office of Great West Life Assurance Company for two and a half years; is a member of the bars of Manitoba and Ontario, and was executive assistant to the Secretary of State for Canada for 10 years.

Mr. McPherson also was a member of the Canadian Military Mission to the Allied Control Council in Berlin, and Dominion delegate to the Inter-Allied Reparations' Agency in Brussels.

Now operating 10 machines, two of them the largest of their type in the world, OAS is playing an important supply role in several of B.C.'s major industrial projects. Among them are the Alcan development at Kitimat and the Peace River of land natural gas exploration program.
