To Whom the Power?

OHN HART has resigned. In four words this fact I faces the public of British Columbia and the supporters of the Coalition Government have to decide if they are going to continue with this form of government or whether the two old-line parties wish to return to their original partisanship and face the electorate divided against the C.C.F.

There is no gainsaying the fact that John Hart and his Coalition cabinet have given this province good government-in fact, the best government British Columbia has had for years—and it is now up to members of both parties to decide whether or not they are going to continue this form of government. It is our belief that the Coalition must continue in office, not only for the sake of the interests of the province as a whole, but in the interests of democracy, and there must remain in British Columbia a form of government which appeals to the majority of the general public and not to those minorities whose belief and thoughts are directed towards the socialization of our industries and which are propounded more or less in countries whose ideologies are contrary to the opinions of British Columbia people.

While it is premature to say who will be the leader of the government to succeed Mr. Hart, it is perhaps not idle to conjecture that it must at least be a man of substance and with all the powers of leadership. Party affiliations, therefore, must be disregarded and efforts made to find a man, the right man, who can safely be entrusted with that leadership. A convention will be called at a later date to decide who will lead the Liberal party in B.C., and this, of course, is a matter entirely independent of who will be the leader of the government in office at Victoria.

There must be no doubt about selecting a worthy successor to Mr. Hart, a man who has carried out the duties of premier during a trying time, and who, in his years of elderly statesmanship, may be now allowed to rest on his laurels.

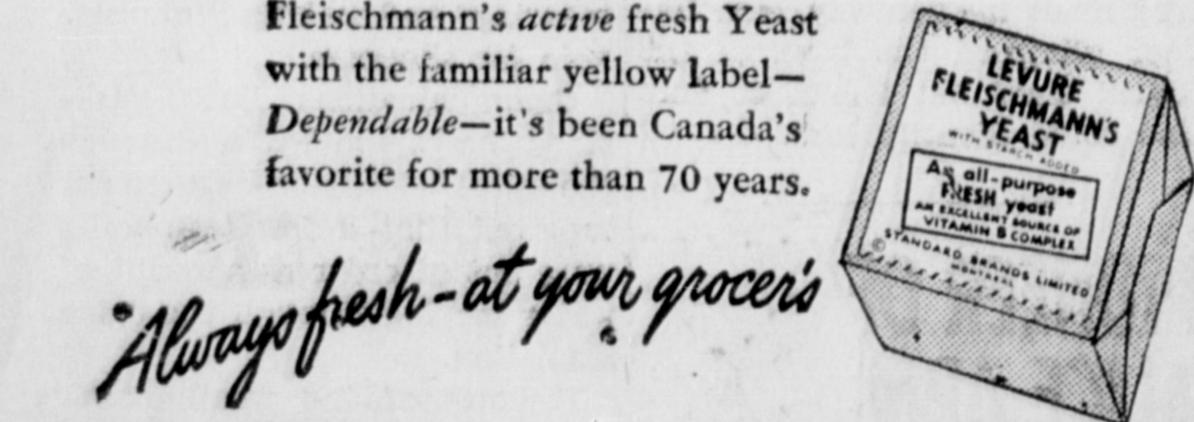

Whatever happens, whether the new leader be a Liberal or Conservative, the Coalition must be held together, and in face of the destructive forces getting into power, which is not only a remote possibility but a very serious one, all those who favor having democracy in our midst must unite and drive back the onslaught which will undoubtedly be made when the next general election comes upon us-an election which may come at any time and for which we must be prepared.

Haunts, Habits of Migratory Birds Surveyed In West

THE PAS, Man. (P)-First of sportsmen.

Some 20 inspection stations are Mississippi flyway and the first Arthur S. Hawkins of Minneapolis, is in this district. Hawkins has been examining birds since the start of the hunting

In addition to his present work, he has completed a survey of duck breeding grounds in the Saskatchewan delta breeding regions east of The Pas and reports from his summer's work that breedings of ducks are lower even than last year which is the lowest recorded.

He believes that fowl were forced further north than usual this season because of spring flooding in the Saskatchewan marshes but that, barring repetition of this for several years, the change is only temporary.
