WAR-ADAPTED HORSE STORY
Action of the fighting Seabees, combined with the stirring drama of a youth's devotion to his pet horse, offers unusual entertainment at the Capitol Theatre this Friday and Saturday in "Gallant Bess," filmed in natural color. The story opens with Marshall Thompson, young orphaned rancher, and his neighbor, Charles Trowbridge, awaiting the arrival of a foal from "Bess," the former's beloved mare.

Shortly after, at the general store owned by Cem Bevans, Thompson is given a patriotic speech by a fast-talking Navy recruiting officer, Chill Wills, and signs up for the Seabees. Just before his outfit ships out for the Pacific, "Bess" catches pneumonia and dies. Thompson is inconsolable until he saves the life of another horse on a Pacific atoll and makes another "Bess" of his new equine pal.

In a skirmish with Japs, Thompson is severely wounded and is about to be hospitalized home without his beloved horse. At the last minute, however, when the faithful animal swims after him, Thompson's commanding officer relents and orders the horse to be helped aboard the craft. Back home, the new "Bess" has a foal and Thompson's dream of owning a horse ranch is on its way toward reality.
