

Feathered Friend Makes Quick Survey of Newspaper Business

A baby bird got a "birds-eye" view of the newspaper business at noon today. The little bird flew in the front door of the Daily News and the printers were out to lunch and perched itself on a typewriter machine, where it surveyed the "back shop." When the men returned, the little feathered visitor scurried out the window.

...The affection of a dog is strongly felt in the case of six-year-old Omar Mariel of Ed- and his canine friend, owned by a neighbor. The neighbor sent the dog to different points in the country. Each time Jerry would bring his way back to young Omar. The last time Jerry took months to travel the 45 miles. Omar's mother tried to successfully many times to get the dog. She said she will never be alone because the two, she is going together.

...IN HIS FOOTSTEPS—Veteran Canadian Pacific Airlines captain Robert C. Randall (front) of Vancouver, shows his twin brother, Edward (left) and Robert Jr., who have just started their career as first officers on CPA domestic routes, the route he flew on flights between Vancouver and Tokyo for the airline. The two boys are ready any time to listen to dad, who started flying the years before they were born. Captain Randall began commercial flying in 1938, and his service with the airline dates from 1937, when he flew with one of the smaller companies which amalgamated later to form Canadian Pacific Airlines.

Letter Late Than Never, Says Minister of His Anniversary

It doesn't make any difference who you are, you aren't supposed to forget your wedding anniversary—but a lot of people do. At least, that's what Hon. Robert H. Winters said last week as he hustled to the CNR telegraph office to send a wire message for their 16th anniversary. The jovial 42-year-old minister from Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, forgot to tell friends who accompanied him that his anniversary was last Friday. "I guess I'll have some explaining to do when I get home," as he figured out the telegram. "I'll just say I was supposed to communicate with her," he said as he made out the wire.

WOMAN MLA — Mrs. J. E. Cooper is the only woman member of the 53-seat Saskatchewan Legislature and the only woman ever to represent Regina in the assembly. Mrs. Cooper, married to a Regina schoolteacher, says she first became interested in politics during her schoolteaching days. She is a former president of the Regina Local Council of Women.

Lone Woman Member in Saskatchewan

REGINA—The only woman member of the 53-seat Saskatchewan legislature—and the only woman ever to represent Regina in assembly—is Mrs. J. E. Cooper.

Mrs. Cooper, who is married to a Regina school teacher, says she first became interested in politics during her school teaching days. "You couldn't teach school during the depression and see what it did to children without feeling that something had to be done," she says.

A consequence, Mrs. Cooper hopes to concentrate her efforts in the legislature on education and welfare. She says the work in the legislature is "along the line of the community work I've been doing anyway, but this gives me a chance to do it more effectively."

Mrs. Cooper, a middle-aged woman, insists that she isn't a typical politician. She enjoyed the campaign leading up to the June 11 Saskatchewan general election but found it tiring.

A CCF candidate, she was elected in Regina along with Labor Minister C. C. Williams and Provincial Treasurer C. M. Fines. In her spare time, Mrs. Cooper does a great deal of reading. She also plays the piano "a little" and likes cooking. She is an active worker in Knox Metropolitan United Church, where her pet project is marionette shows.

The last woman member of the Saskatchewan legislature was Mrs. Beatrice Trew, who represented Qu'Appelle-Wolseley constituency for the CCF from 1944 to 1949.

Rupert Pioneer Dies in South

George Ladicos died in Vancouver late last week, according to a message received in Prince Rupert Sunday. He had not lived here for years, but was very well known particularly among the pioneer citizens, and is well remembered. He was interested in salmon fishing, and had also been active in the development of cafes.

Strip Tease Salesgirls Lure Buyers

BRISTOL, Eng. (Reuters)—A local dress shop has hit upon a new lure to get more customers—the salesgirls provide a strip-tease with each sale.

Mrs. Kathleen Phillips, who manages the shop, asked her girls if they would wear new dresses in the store and take them off when they made a sale. The girls agreed. They began their "strip" sales technique recently in a packed shop before a mixture of male and female customers.

New Pipe For Pan In London Garden

LONDON (CP)—Craftsmen have cast a new musical pipe to replace the one stolen from the famous statue of Peter Pan in London's Kensington Gardens.

Theft of the original pipe marked the third time Sir James Barrie's fairyland youngster had been attacked by vandals. The statue was tarred and feathered in 1928 and daubed and damaged in 1943.

Airfield Farms

OSLO (CP)—Norwegian government officials have worked out detailed plans for farm cultivation of all airfields between runways and buildings. At the new airfield at Rygge 900 feet of the total 1,200-foot width will be brought under the plow. All new airfields are being built with an eye to increasing grain production.

Two Decades See Edinburgh Grow

EDINBURGH, Scotland (CP)—The City of Edinburgh has grown faster than Scotland as a whole during the last 20 years, says a report, issued recently, on the 15th census of Scotland made in 1951.

The report notes that there are 35,063 "surplus" females and a remarkable number of widows. One woman has the distinction of special anonymous mention because she is the only citizen who speaks Gaelic only. Since 1801 Edinburgh's population has increased more than seven times compared with an

Buyer Resistance Noted At British Mid-summer Sales

LONDON — Britain's annual summer sales opened amid a general feeling that not since 1939 have West End stores shown such quality goods at such low prices.

With textile mills working half-time from Aberdeen to the English Midlands, shopkeepers apparently were determined to break the buyers' resistance that has become a major trade problem in the last three years. But although good summer dresses were obtainable for as little as 30s., woolen dresses for around £2 and coats at less than £5, shop assistants still found it necessary to "sell" their goods.

Barbara Nelson, fur saleswoman at a Kensington store, who was depending on sales commission for her summer vacation in Ireland, spent 60 minutes talking one customer into buying a quality musquash coat, cut in price by almost half. And 'his was by no means Barbara's hardest sale.

LONDON HEAT WAVE
The sales coincided with London's biggest heat wave since 1947 and this found demand highest in such summer wear as the organdie, chiffon, nylon and the gaily-colored waffle-pique dresses with widely-flared skirts.
