FACES ANOTHER PRISON TERM AFTER RELEASE

Like a homing bird, Clifford Pettipiece flew back to Prince Rupert Saturday afternoon, warmed no doubt by the anticipation of northern hospitality which he had missed for the last four months while in Okalla jail where he had been sent by Magistrate Vance for breach of recognizance.

Twelve hours after he stepped from the plane at Seal Cove airport he was subject of official hospitality on the part of the police who picked him up at 4:30 Sunday morning and laid two charges of supplying liquor to Indians against him.

This morning, Pettipiece faced the prospect of spending another four months in Okalla after he had pleaded guilty to both charges and had been fined $100 and costs or two months in jail on each charge, the jail sentence to run consecutively.

Pettipiece pleaded guilty to supplying liquor to two Indian girls. The police at the same time picked up Ted Davis, who also pleaded guilty to two supplying charges and was fined $50 with an optional month in jail on each charge. Sentences in this case also were consecutive.

Pettipiece was sent down a little more than four months ago for breach of recognizance after he had been given six months suspended sentence by Magistrate Vancouver in connection with a breaking and entering of Little's News Stand last March.

Also in police court this morning, W. Sankey and A. Ryan were fined $5 plus $3.50 costs or five days in jail when they pleaded guilty under the Indian Act to drunkenness.

Robert Nixon, charged under the Indian Act with possession of liquor, was fined $25 and costs or a month in jail after he pleaded guilty.

James Leighton was fined $15 and costs or seven days in jail after pleading guilty to a charge of drunkenness laid under the Government Liquor Act.
