ENTHUSIASM IS REKINDLED

Enthusiasm of the pupils of the High and various city public schools for Junior Red Cross activities was rekindled last week through visitations to the classrooms and in assembly of Miss Margaret Palmer, provincial director of Junior Red Cross and a former local teacher. Miss Palmer left at the week-end for Smithers, Terrace and other interior points and will be back here this Saturday night, sailing next Monday night by the Princess Adelaide on her return to her headquarters in Vancouver.

Speaking to an assembly of Booth Memorial High School pupils, Miss Palmer told of the tremendous increase in membership of Junior Red Cross from 78,000 last year to 90,000 this year. She outlined the peacetime activities of the organization principal among which were general activities is promotion of improved health, the expending of about $2000 per month on crippled and handicapped children, and overseas relief in the way of furnishing school supplies, food and clothing for the needy children of Britain and Europe, and the providing of gifts and comforts for disabled veterans.

At Borden Street School Miss Palmer found the pupils preparing for a Christmas sale to raise funds for crippled and handicapped children while at Conrad Street there were activities on behalf of the patients of Miller Bay Hospital.

Reminiscences and Reflections
By W.J.

One can easily recall that Vancouver was once as sensitive as an eyeball or stomach ulcer about her rainfall. Rain in Vancouver? Nix! Go to Prince Rupert to see cloudbursts. Vancouver basks in the sun. Lately however, that city has been publishing regularly a public opinion quiz which bares the inner thoughts of her citizens. Vancouver just loves rain. To be precise, 71% of her people prefer a musical drizzle to the pure, spotless flakes from on high, making certain the jingle of bells and the healthful games played by rosy-cheeked children. It's great to hear such a candid confession, and note the following of an example. Prince Rupert has never had to be evasive. Here, we guileless, artless folk just tell the truth, and lo, these many years, we are known for what we are—fortune's favorites.

There used to be stage plays in Prince Rupert with actual actors and actresses treading the boards and flesh and blood musicians down front. If you did not care much for the production, you at least had the comforting thought that it was always your privilege to hiss the lot. But today, that's a waste of time and effort. The shadowy figures and metallic melody remain supremely indifferent to either praise or blame, or to you and your hiss. Members of stage and press are sometimes acquainted and are quite approachable.

British Columbia was 89 years old last week when the anniversary was observed at Fort Langley. Up to 1893 development lagged. A railway had been running for about eight years. Growth was leisurely. Skeena was indeed far away—even primitive. Today, the province's real forward movement is only commencing. This is the air age, the era of speed. The horse is out, and so's the buggy.

The wedding week was, doubtless, a good tonic for the hard-pressed people of the British Isles. For years there had been nothing to relieve the accumulated burdens of bereavements and losses, anxiety and perplexities common as well as personal. And as if there was not enough gloom, the blackout returned to help lessen the cost of power. So Cupid put smiles on careworn faces, the ring of gladness in countless voices, and almost restored the sense of youth and glowing potency as the great day dawned. Magnificence and music, beauty and brilliance passed along the ancient streets from palace to abbey and back again. It was a noble show, and exactly what was needed.

There are as many problems as before. There will be more endurance tests. Austerity is not any the less. But the change from dreariness to radiance, from dour thoughts to joyous anticipation, from tiresome stodginess and dull routine—the change from all this to something that had enchantment in it came as a national refresher, bringing renewed strength and life, and the will to carry on.

PRINCE RUPERT YEARS AGO

November 25, 1922

R. May, Moricetown farmer, returned to his home after a business visit to the city in which he sold a large quantity of potatoes to the Prince Rupert Table Supply Co. Mr. May had 10 acres in potatoes with the exceptional yield of 97 tons to the acre.

According to the report of Police Chief W. H. Vickers submitted to the police commission, $3,099 was collected in police court fines during October. There were 51 cases in court during the month, 34 of which resulted in convictions. Of the remainder, two were dismissed and 14 carried over into November.

In answer to a request for information on his stand on the question of lower freight rates, Fred Stork, M.P., wired Mayor C. E. Tisdall of Vancouver that he was "using every influence to remove unfair discrimination in freight rates against British Columbia."

November 25, 1912

Alfred Thomas, father-in-law of Alderman G. W. Kerr, was killed and two others were injured when a fire auto fell over the plank road at the corner of Eighth Avenue and Hays Cove Circle. Chief MacDonald of the fire department sustained a broken arm. The accident occurred during a practice run and was due to slippery roads.

PETITION LAID BEFORE COUNCIL

A petition, reputedly bearing the signatures of 900 citizens desiring "such action as will assure the continued operation of Arrow Bus Lines," was presented to city council last night. The petition asked that, "should a franchise be given, council consider granting it to Arrow Bus Lines." The petition was tabled.

Vancouver Weather Hampering Flying

Fog and thick misty rains in the Vancouver area have been holding up the Canadian Pacific Airlines service between Prince Rupert and Vancouver. Yesterday's flight from here to Sandspit was cancelled when the plane from Vancouver was unable to get any further north than Port Hardy. Today's flight left at noon as scheduled.
