Beef Business

IKE ANY BUSINESS, there are points about - cattle raising and marketing that, unless you follow it, are missed, in giving any consideration to the subject.

Right now, beef is a timely topic. We talk about the cost of living, alleged profits, charges, and all that. Beef is an important item. It's the good old trustees of the formerly private- matter of construction of a con- of B.C. Municipalities scheme sentence? 'I want to see you.' backlog of solid, dependable nourishment but a lot of us, in discussing the situation, do so with rather limited knowledge.

Waldo Kane, who seems to be qualified to say a few words, states that today, a steer raised in B.C. is sold by the rancher at a figure around 13 to 14 cents. A steak, from that carcass, sold in the butcher shop is bought at say 50c a pound.

Undoubtedly, there is a spread, but get this! The cattleman is paid live weight and there is only 60 per cent edible meat in the animal sold. There is freight to be paid from shipping point to destination-along with holding charges at the stock yards, abattoir fees, wholesalers and middleman's overhead, as well as plenty more incidentals, all of which mount up. It may not be all velvet even if the consumer has to pay all the shot.

UNITY

NTERMINGLING, one with the other can be thought of as a first step toward attainment of the unity that today is being so earnestly urged. It can be cultivated, even in a small way, to begin money might be used in that with. For only through actual association does it way. become possible to form an opinion of someone else. Not infrequently revision is needed. People are so often misjudged. There may be faulty relationship among kinsfolk. In a wider sense the same may be true of communities, and in a still broader meaning it becomes international. Yet unity, Black's. building on a large or small scale or helping to be the means of getting people to really know and understand each other, bristles with difficulty. It is easier to talk of unity than to achieve it.
