BLIND BUT CARRIES ON

Comedian Michael Sachs Is Still on Road

By HILLIARD SCHENDORF

NEWARK, N.J. (AP)—Comedian Michael Sachs is on the road again playing before audiences he can't see—because he is totally blind.

The feel of the boards and audience applause are a tonic to the 57-year-old comic, a veteran of 42 years in the theatre. He lost his sight completely two years ago.

Sachs lost the sight of one eye as a five-year-old. He was playing a Russian prince being spirited away from revolutionaries. A blank cartridge was fired close to his face and powder burns blinded his left eye.

Two years ago, a blood clot on the retina robbed him of his other eye.

"It was like a curtain going down," he recalls. "I was having breakfast with Dick Zeisler, manager of the Grand Theatre in St. Louis, when it happened. There wasn't any warning. Suddenly, I was blind."

All treatments have failed to restore his sight. He gets around now with the aid of his "seeing eye lady," as he calls his teammate, Alice Kennedy.

Sachs thought his theatrical career was ended when "the curtain went down." Six months later, he ran into Al Somerby, Boston theatre owner.

"The first thing he said was 'You open week after next,'" Sachs recalls. "I didn't know if I could make it; I thought I might get lost on the stage."

But Sahchs opened in two weeks in Boston.

"SEEING EYE LADY" HIS GREAT HELP

Miss Kennedy was to lead him onto the stage, "but when I heard my entrance music"—"Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here," Sachs' music for two decades—"I said, 'Never mind, darling, never mind—go ahead."

Ever since, with the aid of Miss Kennedy, Sachs has been at home on the stages he has played for more than 40 years.

"There's a feeling—I can't explain it—but you can feel things. I can hear the audience when I'm out there. And I know every board and every nail on all those stages."

Sachs plays vaudeville routines that were old years ago. He is a "mugger." It isn't subtle, but it's funny.

Many of the customers nowadays don't even know he is blind. An ophalmologist in one audience came to Sachs' dressing-room after the show to examine him.

SNOW LOWER ON RUPERT MOUNTS

Snow on the mountain tops around Prince Rupert has evidently come to stay. There has been a heavy fall on the higher altitudes on the Tsimpsean Peninsula across the harbor and on the peaks overlooking Wark Canal. During the weke-end, the snow line had crept well down Mount Morse, opposite Prince Rupert, but has disappeared since then.

Accommodation For Burned-Out People

All who were burned out through the destruction of the Central Hotel have found living accommodation. To be so suddenly called on to hustle at midnight into the cold, rainy street from the room that had to many been home came as an emergency indeed. However, help and co-operation were not wanting in assisting to make a fresh start. Some were given accommodation in the naval annex building. The Vancouver papers played up the fire. Headlines were heavy and space given to details.

Gold Strike Here Called "Fantastic"

Front page publicity is given the recent discovery of some gold in Prince Rupert by Jessen's Weekly in Fairbanks. It is not featured, nor is the story long or does it boast a scare head. It's just a quiet little story, describing the strike as "fantastic."
