The shrewd prince, now 61, is among the wealthiest men but shuns rich living. When the British ruled 300,000,000 Indians, they never fully understood him. The statesmen of the dominions of Pakistan and India are no better off. His own people understand him. He is boss.

By virtue of old and friendly association. British officials watched with interest when negotiations between India and Hyderabad were opened recently. The negotiations have ended with nothing decided. This is in line with the Nizam's policy of wait-and-see. He has said cheerfully that his state has affinities and common interests with both India and Pakistan and he does not want to take sides.

While massacres and furies have swept the Punjab and elsewhere, the Nizam has kept order in his own state and the dread communal war between by a few demonstrations and some nervousness.
