New Gymnasium To Widen Sport Opportunities

The people of Prince Rupert who like to indulge in energetic sports and recreation are going to have plenty of choice when the new addition to the Civic Centre is completed. Workmen are busy now closing it in and preparing it for hardwood floors and walls.

The new section will be used for specialized gymnasium training and recreation. It is 51 by 31 feet and besides a handball court it will have all the equipment, such as horizontal bars, vaulting horses and rings needed for get-fit classes.

If need be it can be used for badminton but for the main part it will be used for straight gym activities, leaving the present gymnasium with its 90 by 50 foot floor and gallery accommodations for 700, free for mass recreation.

Below the new gymnasium a concrete walled room, 30 feet square, will be turned into a room for those who like to keep in shape with the more rugged methods of training such as punching the bag or getting into the ring to learn some of the arts of boxing. This room is situated so that people wishing to make use of it won't interfere with other activities in the building.

The new gymnasium will have a main entrance off the corridor that runs along the building off the lunch counter. It is handy to the showers and dressing rooms and stairs now connect it with the main exits at the rear of the Civic Centre.

By using the auditorium and the two gymnasiums, it will be possible this winter to have seven courts of badminton in operation at once.

Altogether it looks as though there isn't anything the Civic Centre can't provide in the way of indoor recreation. Neither young nor old will be able to say there is "nothing to do" in Prince Rupert.

SCRAMBLED UP

How good are you at cleaning up messes? Here are some words that are really scrambled up. Try and see what you can do about rearranging the letters to form the correct words.

1. LIECH: South American country.
2. Wasporr: a bird.
3. VIRAMEN: ancient Greek goddess.
4. CATEHMB: Shakespearean tragedy.

WARSAW RISING FROM WARTIME RUBBLE HEAPS

By DANIEL DeLUCE

WARSAW, (AP) — Warsaw is the Lazarus of European cities. The stone desert along the Vistula throbs again with life.

No words or statistics can describe the miracle that has touched Poland's capital since Soviet and Polish troops mopped up the last German resistance here in January, 1945.

It lay, then, a fire-gutted, dynamite-blasted skeleton. Barricades from the people's revolt in the previous summer still blocked the snow-covered streets. Crude wooden crosses marked the sidewalk graves of Polish dead.

A lend-lease Red Army truck, which the Russians had given to the Poles, carried me for miles through the ghostly welter of ruins. The sight was worse than any I had seen during the war in nine other countries.

The resurrection of their capital is the Poles greatest single achievement since the war.

Before the war, there were 500,000 habitable dwellings in Warsa wand the population approximated 1,000,000. When the Germans left, there were 4,000 rooms.

No western country experienced the Teutonic fury which was given full vent in the East. By methodical demolitions without any military importance, the Wehrmacht turned Warsaw to rubble while the S.S. was burning the last of 2,500,000 victims in the crematoria of Oswiecim.

But 340,000 Poles have come back to the city whose spirit every foreign conqueror in history has failed to break. Pragu has another 200,000. By 1950 the total may again be 1,000,000.

The government has poured 17,000,000,000 Zlotys (official rate, $170,000,000) into the rebuilding and private capital has supplied 300,000,000 Zlotys. It is a quarter of what is needed to complete the work.

By no chance irony, German prisoners of war are now salvaging bricks in what was the ghetto until S.S. Gen. Jurgen's troops levelled it in 1943. Warsaw has named one o fits newest, widest streets: "Heroes of the Ghetto."
