ROLLING OUT THE BARREL OF PLEASURE

Former Flying Officer Finds What It's Like to Have a Barrel of Money

SANT JOHN, N.B. — Many men may wonder how it feels to have a barrel of money. Ralph Lawton not only wondered, but he did something about it until his dream came true.

The story started more than 10 years ago following his demobilization as a flying officer with the RCAF. Years in uniform had trained him to neatness and he acquired a daily habit of setting aside accumulated pennies. Soon overflowing, a tray on his dresser was replaced by a candy box but that too became full and the pennies kept coming.

"Just for the novelty of it," Lawton recalls, "I took an empty nail keg, put a new head on it and cut a slot in the head just big enough to admit a penny, and duly installed it in a corner of my room. I had to take a lot of kidding from the family, of course, but I just kept dropping pennies into the slot."

"A couple of weeks ago, when I just couldn't force another penny into that keg, I decided to open it and bank the works. The kidding changed to envy and admiration and, even I was shocked when the flood of coppers rolled out."

COUNTING BIG JOB

The keg had grown so heavy it couldn't be lifted and Lawton's mother had many pointed comments about the impossibility of sweeping that corner of the room.

A whole week of evenings was required for Lawton to count the pennies while his girl friend wrapped them in rolls of 50. The final count was 21,000 pennies, or $210.

"I took them to the bank in $20 and $35 instalments," says Lawton, "taking care to explain how it happened. I was making such extensive 'copper' deposits in case they thought I might have come by the money by some unorthodox means."

"In case you're interested, the head is back on the keg and I've begun on my second barrel of money. My girl friend's only comment was that it might be a good idea to save quarters instead of pennies, but that would be a bit steep these days."

AMBITIOUS EFFORT

Before the war Britain produced only one-third of her food, but by the end of the war was producing one-half of her food.

POPE URGING HONEST MEN GUARD PEACE

VATICAN CITY — Pope Pius in his annual Christmas message declared today the "policy of insincerity" among nations was blocking the path to peace and called for a "league of honest men" to safeguard the world against war.

The Pontiff specially blamed "a growing tendency toward insincerity" for the collapse of the foreign ministers' conference which, he said, left the world "further than ever from true peace." He named no names in placing the blame for the present state of world affairs, but his 4,400-word address contained many passages which western listeners, at least, interpreted as condemnation of Communism and of post-war policies of the Soviet Union.

City Pioneer's Son Buried At Vancouver

Hugh M. Dunn, 65, retired customs official, who will be remembered by friends in Prince Rupert, died in Vancouver recently. He lived at 3950 West 35th Avenue.

Mr. Dunn was a son of the late Thomas Dunn, a member of Vancouver's first city council and who, in the early days of Prince Rupert, established a hardware store here. The father built the first frame residence of any size in this city. It stands at Second Avenue and Seventh Street.

Hugh Dunn is survived by his wife, Freda; a son, Ted, Vancouver; two brothers, Earl, Vancouver, and Nelson, Los Angeles, and three sisters in California. The funeral services took place last Tuesday in Vancouver.

LONDON SHOWS SMART SHOES

But Most of New Styles Are Slated For Export

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON — The first spiked heels to be seen in Britain since the war share prominence with the flat walking shoe in production this winter, with most of the new styles earmarked for export.

Also on display at the exhibition of Quality Footwear, where designers showed new models, was the Oxford style, with a high lacing front, pointed toe and medium built-up heel.

In the high heel, adaptations of the Louis styles were evident. The high frontage, carried out in various designs, emphasized the arch and the ankle.

Lightweight suede, satin and kid hold the first place in dress afternoon and evening shoes. The more frivolous designs bring back the decorative perforated and stitched designs so popular in the '20s.

In the open front designs the sling-back still holds prominent place. The new low-cut front and double cross-straps or ankle straps take advantage of the new height in heel, and open toes in these styles are the most popular.

Few Platform Soles

Platform soles, so prevalent recently in high-heeled styles, have disappeared from all but a few of the latest designs. Their heaviness was not popular with designers seeking an impression of delicacy and femininity.

Crepe-soled flat-heeled shoes in suede and calf are back for home and export. Normally-soled walking shoes, with hand-stitched welts, contrast with the heavier models. These and lighter shoes are being made in lizard skins.

A highlight of the show was the variety of design and color in the high or ankle-length bootie or overboot, available for export only in the higher lengths.

The very low slipper-type Brevit is still on the market, providing a light walking-shoe flatterer to town wear. There is also the new high-backed, hidden heel shoe, where the suede or leather is brought down to the sole of the heel.

The wedge heel still holds prominence in all flat styles and boots, being specially noticeable in all sandal types.
