U.S. Attitude On Aluminum Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP)—Representative Emanuel Celler (Dem. N.Y.) urged the United States administration Tuesday to conclude arrangements for obtaining Canadian aluminum because there is an immediate cause for action to build up U.S. supplies.
Celler issued a privately financed pamphlet which he said contained his personal objections to the recent finding of the Senate-House of Representatives Committee on Defence Production.

A joint committee headed by Senator B. R. Maybank (Dem. S.C.) reported on June 30 that domestic sources were sufficient to meet the need and recommended the proposal by Aluminum Company of Canada be turned down.

Celler headed the House judiciary sub-committee which he said explored the aluminum situation a year ago and collected a comprehensive body of facts.

He accused the Maybank group of following only two days' hearing with recommendations "which would seriously and in my judgment adversely affect the availability of aluminum for defence and domestic uses."

Celler said Alcan had offered to enlarge its exports to the U.S. providing the U.S. government guaranteed to buy 200,000 tons by 1957 for stockpiling, if private U.S. users did not absorb the full output.

This, said Celler, would save the U.S. government $6,000,000 and would guarantee enough aluminum for such needs as expanding air power and for civilian goods.

This was disclosed here at noon today by Guy Williams, a member of the northern executive of the Native Brotherhood, who said final word will be received probably later today from Chief William Scow, president, at Vancouver.

Williams said Chief Scow "informed us this morning that the Native Brotherhood agreement with the cannery would be finalized in Vancouver today."
"He has instructed us to release the boats and go to the grounds as some of the natives have as much as 10 hours' travel to get to their locations."

Instructions to begin sockeye salmon fishing, which came to a halt last Friday at 6 p.m., will be broadcast over Vancouver and Prince Rupert radio stations and also by cannery from their boats and camps.

Williams confirmed yesterday's report that outcome of the Native Brotherhood vote last week-end showed 85 per cent favored fishing.

He said voting by the Native Brotherhood and members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union was kept separate.

"In view of the fact the vote was not counted jointly, we are obliged under our constitution to resume fishing."

"The Native Brotherhood is chartered under the Societies Act of B.C. and in accordance with our constitution if a majority favor fishing, we have no alternative but to abide by their wishes."
