LIFE IMPRISONMENT GIVEN TO CHICAGO LADS WHO MURDERED YOUNG FRANKS

workman traversing the Pennsylvania railroad tracks at 118th Street, a wild, uninhabited section just inside the southern corporate limits of Chicago, saw the feet of a nude body protruding from a culvert between two small lakes. The body was taken to an undertaker's establishment where it rested unidentified until late in the afternoon, when a brother of Mrs. Franks went to the morgue on a chance that the body might be that of Robert.

He identified it positively although a pair of horn-rimmed spectacles were affixed on the face. The glasses were found near the culvert and the undertaker thought they belonged to the boy.

Then began one of the greatest manly in the history of Chicago, because of the evident brutality of the murderers and the prominence of the Franks family. More than a score of persons, including two instructors at the Harvard School, were arrested, but released when they were able to disprove connection with the kidnapping and murder.

Lads Confessed

Columns of newspaper space were devoted to the case but the headlines were diminishing in size as hope of apprehending the murderers dwindled when unexpectedly Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney, announced on May 31 that Richard Loeb, son of Albert H. Loeb, 5017 Ellis Avenue, vice-president of Sears Roebuck & Co., and Nathan F. Leopold Jr., son of a wealthy paper box manufacturer and shipping man, 4754 Greenwood Avenue, had confessed to the kidnapping and murder.

It developed that all clues with the single exception of the spectacles found near the body had been exhausted. By tracing thousands of prescriptions for spectacles, the state's attorney's force finally eliminated all but four which called for spectacles the same as those found alongside the body. Of the quartette, the officers seized upon Leopold. He previously had been questioned by the police because of his known frequent trips to the place where the Franks boy's body was found, but was released when he explained that his interest in that locality was based solely upon his study of ornithology, the science of bird life, the region abounding in unusual specimens.

Loeb and Leopold related what at first appeared to be an unimpeachable alibi. Leopold finally admitted possible ownership of the spectacles but had about convinced the authorities that he had lost them while on a legitimate trip to the region.

Boys Broke Down

Their story of their whereabouts on the day and evening of the kidnapping was broken when Sven Englund, the Leopold chauffeur, asserted that the red Willys Knight automobile in which the boys declared they had been riding, had not been out of the Leopold garage at the time specified. Loeb, upon learning that exclaimed "My God, can that be true; give me a glass of water," and within a few minutes was relating a complete confession of his participation with Leopold in the kidnapping and murder. Leopold, told that Loeb was confessing, also made a detailed confession. The two statements jibed in all details except the one as to which actually had welded the lethal instrument. Leopold and Loeb both maintained that they had been driving the automobile into which the Franks boy was enticed and killed and that the other had struck the death dealing blows.

The confessions set out that the two were intent on committing the "perfect crime." In detail they ran:

The crime had been planned for several months. No particular victim had been selected. The afternoon on which the Franks boy was chosen had been spent in reconnoitering the Harvard school district for a possible subject. John Levinson, 9-year old grandson of Julius Rosenwald, noted philanthropist and president of Sears Roebuck & Co., was singled out. He escaped, however, in the general rush home at the end of the baseball game in which the boys were participating, and partly because of the presence of an instructor.

Loeb and Leopold were driving slowly down the street, having abandoned hope for the day, when suddenly they espied Bobby Franks en route home. Loeb addressed him, inviting him into the automobile. Bobby demurred. He said he had only a short distance to go home and preferred to walk. Loeb, who had played tennis frequently with the lad, insisted that he wanted to talk with him about a new tennis racket, whereupon Bobby entered the machine.

Struck on Head

Seated, he was struck upon the head with a taped cold chisel, and rags were stuffed into his mouth. The kidnapers, not realizing that the boy was dead, drove about for a time intending to kill the child when they reached the place they had selected for disposing of the body. They finally reached the rendezvous, stripped the boy of his clothes and poured an acid on his face with the intention of disfiguring it beyond recognition. Leopold donned wading boots, strode into the water and thrust the body face downward into the culvert. It stuck and he forced it further with his foot, but in the haste in the darkness left the murdered boy's feet protruding. Also in the hurry of leaving the scene, Loeb picked up Leopold's coat bottom up and lost the tell-tale spectacles from the breast pocket. They also left one of Bobby's brown sport stockings and his cap.

Loeb and Leopold then proceeded to dispose of various articles of Bobby's clothing, the automobile robe in which the body had been wrapped and the other things used in the murder. Some were burned, some were buried in widely separated spots and the cold chisel was hurled from the automobile not far from the scene of the kidnapping.

The automobile used was obtained from a rent-a-car agency and was of the same type as

The Leather will Wear when you use a polish which will keep it soft and pliable, and prolong its life.

Wrote Letter Before

The ransom letter was prepared well in advance of the kidnapping, sealed and the envelope left unaddressed, that feature to depend upon the child chosen for death. The typewriter was a portable stolen from the house of the fraternity of which Loeb was a member before he was graduated from University of Michigan. The letter written, the typewriter was damaged badly and thrown into a lagoon in Jackson Park.

Went Over Ground

Upon concluding their confessions Loeb and Leopold agreed to go with officers and prosecutors on a tour of the route they had travelled from the moment the Franks boy was seized until the last article in connection with his murder was disposed of. They pointed out the various spots where they had buried or burned articles and assisted the officers in their recovery. The typewriter was retrieved from the lagoon by a professional diver.
