Mythical Reforms Not Always Advantage.

For a number of years the people of Prince Rupert worried themselves over the question of allowing gas boats on the Skeena; River salmon fisheries. Under the regulations they were prohibited, the reason for the prohibition being given as a desire to conserve the fish. It was the impression among the public that this was a blind and that the real reason for the regulation was the desire of the canneries to conserve the fisheries as? monopoly. This year for the first time gas boats have been allowed on the Skeena River, but so far there has been no change in the method of fishing. The boats are out as usual and the gas engine has not invaded the sacred domain of oar and sail. Possibly it will be some time before a change is made. A any rate there was no great demand for the use of gas boats among the men who are directly interested or there would by this time have been many of them on the fishing grounds. We believe that the abolition of the regulation was right and that such a regulation tends to disturb the public mind, but now that it is taken off nobody seems to be benefited and noall its nakedness though clothed body is injured.

BLAZES NEW TRAIL

"A Woman of Paris," a Portrayal of Life as Actually Lived-His First Serious Production

Predictions are being made that the screening of Charles Chap-..... $1.00 lin's own story in "A Woman of Paris," starring Edna Purviance. $6.00 will stand forth in motion picture will exert a strong influence on > vital problem, presented with extreme simplicity yet with an unbounded psychological force that will blaze a new trail along the highway of motion picture progress.

The theme is a starfling one, and made the more so because of he utter simplicity and warmth, of feeling that permeats it. It presents a problem with the basics and fundamentals of life. commenting upon it in interesting fashion rather than attempting to solve it.

Mixed Emotions

While the story is of life as studied by Charles Chaplin, it in no wise deals with the life of Chaple but with the lives of others as seen by him. And as in actual life, there is comedy. tragedy, passion, absurdity, melodrama, farce, emotionalism, cynicism-all these Chaplin has combined as ingredients of life in A Woman of Paris." At the same time he has woven an exquisite tapestry portraying the sincerity of a woman's soul in -financial independence in old age and freedom from worry in the present,-by making small payments nicely adjusted to your age and circumstances.

No good citizen would sell his independence if he knew it, but each day that he lives without providing for the future. he is truly selling-on the installment plan-his most precious possession.

Some day he will have to surrender his independence, or his family may have to make good his default when he dies.

Life Insurance is the solution of this problem,-safe, scientific, secure in every way.
