Mr. Muzzy Shows Himself A Suit Preference Fanatic

Mr. Muzzy opened the king of hearts and Mr. Champion played the deuce. Sure of his ground and with a knowing look, Mr. Muzzy promptly shifted to the nine of clubs.

Mr. Dale won with the ace of clubs in his own hand, extract ed trumps in three leads, then led the 10 of clubs and let it ride. Mr. Champion won with the jack and his side collected two more heart tricks. But that was all. Mr. Dale got rid of his losing diamond on dummy's long

Mr. Champion was even madder than usual. "Why did you shift to a club?" he demanded. "Did you think Dale had some long suit on which he could discard all five of dummy's clubs? Or did you see some long suit in dummy on which he south could discard clubs from his own hand?"

"There was no hurry about the club suit," Mr. Champio continued without prompting "Whatever tricks we had clubs we were sure to get. Why didn't you shift to diamonds It would have set them a trick queen. In that case he can lose

"Because," Mr. Muzzy answered, "you played the deuce of a diamond and still make his hearts on my king, telling me contract. Oh, to have a bridge to switch to the lower of the partner for a partner instead of other two suits, outside of a suit preference fanatic. trumps. That was clubs. If you wanted a diamond shift, why didn't you play a big heart's Mr. Champion groaned.
