THEATRE

Wednesday and Thursday, 7 and 9 p.m.

An adaptation of Avery Hopwood's stage success. A clever satire on modern married life. A drama that will smooth out many a marital wrinkle. A picture that sweethearts and newly-weds should not miss. I'll teach you how to handle 'em, how to dandle 'em, and how to keep 'em safe at home. Full of laughs, it illustrates that there can be no eight hour shift in marriage when love demands a twentyfour hour day. To some men a woman is like a street car. They cease the chase after they have caught it. When courting he hunts for excuses to see her; when married he invents excuses to get away from her. Come and learn how to put the chains on skidding husbands.

Lewis Stone, Helene Chadwick, Sidney Bracy, Mary Carr, William V. Mong, Howard Truesdell, Alma Bennett, Lila Leslie and strong cast.

Asked on arrival by the Journal what he thought of the Peace River country, Sir Henry waxed ? enthusiastic. "That's the finest country I ever was in," he declared, "and when the country secures adequate transportation facilities it is going to be a worldbeater."

"I can't tell you anything about the possible relief which the north country may get. I've seen the country, and I've realized used as incubators for trout eggs | from my visit, and from contact | with the splendid settlers all along the route, that there must be facilities afforded for the carrying out of the products of this wonderfully fertile area, but beyond that, at the present time, I cannot go."

Sir Henry could say nothing as to the relative merits of the various proposals which have been put forward from time to time. hough there were undoubtedly benefits to be secured from all the alternatives submitted, either for a railway north or south of the Peace to tidewater, or through the suggested Brule cut-

Monkman Pass

The Monkman Pass route as an alternative to the Wapiti Pass was touched upon, Sir Henry stating that he has been told of this latest alternative while in the north country. The route would undoubtedly be given consideration along with the others, though Sir Henry stated that he knew little of its possibilities personally beyond what little information he had received when on his north trip.

He referred to the forthcoming conference between the railways, the federal government, and the provincial governments of Alberta and British Columbia, where the whole question of an outlet to tidewater for the Peace River country would be thoroughly canvassed, and stated his opinion that whatever solution was finally agreed upon it would be no halfhearted measure, but a real service which would not only be ample for all present requirements of this great country, but would be fully capable of expansion to suit the growth which would accrue with the coming of railway facilities.

Has Done Good

Undoubtedly this north trip of the National Lines' president has done the north a lot of good. Sir Henry is an enthusiastic apostle for the northland, and he will undoubtedly go the limit in backing any reasonable proposal to provide the Peace River country with its outlet to the coast.
