Grotto and Callies, cellar teams in the Billiard League, are scheduled to meet tonight. With clean sweeps all the rage in this particular league this winter, both teams meeting tonight are hoping by that route to put themselves in a more enviable position on the standing sheet. There have been so many surprises in intermediate billiards so far that the fans will not be shocked at anything that might happen.

The Ladies' League basketball players are certainly showing the Seniors and Intermediates the way as far as putting up tight games is concerned. Nothing could have been more interesting than the two games so far played between the Maple Leafs and Gil's and the girls promise to be the big drawing cards of the season. Their play in these two games has been splendid, especially considering the early stage of the season and it should improve with further practice.

The question of whether or not golf is beneficial in the matter of getting in training for other sports has again come up in baseball and Miller Huggins, manager of the New York Yankees, has announced that he will carefully supervise the indulgence of his players in this line when they arrive for their spring training at St. Petersburg, Florida. When asked what he thought of golf as a training stunt for baseball players, Huggins said that golf in moderation did no harm to the younger players but it did more harm than good to the older ones whose muscles and sinews are "set."

DEMPSEY MAY GO TO ENGLAND

No Fighters There Who Have Chance of Winning in go With Champion

LONDON, Nov. 20—Jack Dempsey has let it be noised about that he wouldn't mind coming over to England to take a punch or two at some of the British heavyweights. All of which has caused the sophisticated sportsmen of this land to smile, and the unsophisticated to forsee even darker days ahead for British prestige in the boxing business.

There isn't a boxer in all of Britain who gives any promise of standing up against Dempsey for even a few rounds, unless the champion had a mind to be playful. And the British know this, in fact they poke just as much of their quiet fun at their boxing predicament as do the more boisterous humorists overseas.

Possibilities

After all, who might be matched with Dempsey in a London ring? There is Frank Goddard, the champion, who got his title on a foul. And just the other day he crossed the Channel to do a little fighting in the Basque country with a man named Paolini. Nobody in the boxing game in Britain except Goddard had ever heard of Paolini, for his main business in life had previously been chopping down trees. He gave Goddard a sound thrashing.

Then there is a Joe Beckett who has a long record of cold knockouts registered against him. Not long ago Beckett retired, married, and settled down to a quiet life of watching the boats come and go at Southampton. He sent a little piece to the papers the other day saying he would like to try a "come-back." Nobody else, seemingly, cares to see him try, and he has had no encouragement.

Fun of Bloomfield

After chuckling over the Beckett ambitions, one turns one's thoughts, perhaps to Jack Bloomfield, the cruiser-weight champion who had dreams earlier this year of retrieving British prestige in the pubilistic profession. Tommy Gibbons came over to England from the States and disillusioned Bloomfield, quickly and forcibly. So he too got married and settled down, and even the caption writers in the topical movies made fun of his feeble stand against the American, who gave him an unmerciful thrashing, while the best Bloomfield could do before being put to sleep in the third round was to land four blows, hardly more than love-taps, on the energetic epidermis of his conqueror.

That just about ends the list. There are, of course, promising youngsters doing their stuff in small-time boxing circles over here just as there are plenty of ambitious heavyweights active in America. But none of them are first-raters by any stretch of the imagination.

"They say that money is man's best friend."

"Oh, I don't know. It's always trying to get away from me."
