Superstition Difficult To Eradicate.

The story of the tragedy of the far north when a young Indian lad was hanged by the legs because he was accused of wizardry is something not to be surprised at. It was not many years ago that similar occurrences took place in the New England states by the Christian people who lived there and who ought to have known better.

We are all more or less superstitious. We still are influenced by what we call ill luck. We dread to break a looking-glass or to upset the salt. The majority of people are afraid of their shadows in the dark and something white scares them and almost sends them crazy. We are living in the shadow of the past and are influenced by the lives of our progenitors. While it is necessary to teach the Indians that they are wrong and if necessary to use extreme measures in doing so, yet we can hardly blame them for doing something that only a few years ago our own forefathers were doing.

Humdrum Life Not Attractive.

A humdrum life is not attractive, yet the duties most of us perform are largely a matter of routine and become very monotonous. That is why holidays are desirable and why recreation for evenings and week ends is needed to provide an impetus for carrying on. While our work should always be the most important thing in our lives, our recreation is bound to loom large because it is the part that changes.

Those who put brains into their work will always find something new and interesting in it. Very few jobs are so monotonous that they cannot change. In the newspaper life there is a great deal of routine but there are occasional changes and a certain amount of excitement. Efforts to do work well help to stimulate the worker and keep him from deteriorating. Staleness in work is always to be avoided.

Letter Writing For Recreation.

For those whose work is not too sedentary, letter writing is a useful recreation and mental stimulant. To learn to tell uninteresting things in an interesting way is worth while. It is an art to be learned and cultivated and one that can be lost when out of practice. It is something like stenography, it goes very quickly but can be brought back.

Writing a good letter is a joy to the writer and a joy to the recipient, as well as a means of developing the intellect.

There Is A Limit To Everything.

Almost every virtue has its limitations. If a person is good natured and carries it too far he finds himself without any means of displaying his good nature and also he cultivates in his friends the habit of sponging or taking advantage of that good nature. It can be carried to extreme and the extreme is bad. So it is with almost everything else. It is a good thing to save money but not a good thing to be too saving. That leads to meanness, stinginess, and the person practicing it becomes a miser and therefore miserable. Good food is desirable but too much is objectionable. Good drink is good for the body but too much drink is objectionable. We all enjoy a good conversation but too much talking becomes a bore. There is no end to the number of examples that may be cited. The moderate method is the one to be followed.

Roger Babson And Port Of Vancouver.

Roger Babson, in an address which he gave at Ottawa on Thursday last, went even further than the telegraphed summary indicated, says an Edmonton paper. Not only did he say that he was firmly convinced that children of those in the audience would live to see Vancouver the greatest city on the Pacific coast, but that it would take the place held so long by Liverpool as the principal wheat exchange of the world. If he had said this in Vancouver, he might have been accused of merely trying to make himself agreeable to those among whom he found himself and the fact that it was a body of eastern business men that he was addressing must lend to more weight being given to his predictions.

Canada, he is convinced, has an era of the greatest opportunity ahead of her. In the sale of fundamental natural resources in which she is so rich, the dominion will, in his opinion, be able to control the world's markets. "Were I a young man," he declared, "I would not stay five minutes in the United States, but would come over to your great country and blaze my own trail through the bush."

The Man in the Moon SAYS:-

A PERSON who sidesteps does not make much progress.

THE boys who attend the Gyro hoe down may dress that way but how are they going to develop the necessary whiskers. Jake says they are not old enough.

JUDGE Young told the convivial gathering at the St. Regis the other night that he had lost a hoe. Doubtless that is the one that will be used at the big hoe down Friday.

TALK is the best policy for a commercial traveller, a parson or a politician. Silence is golden, but who ever heard of either of the aforementioned having any gold.

SOME girls go to a finishing school and others get married. In any case they see the finish of the early charm.

WHEN a man begins to think about being married he must consider if there are any previous engagements.

THE United States is like heaven. It is pretty difficult for most of us to get in.

PLEASURE is what we seek; happiness what we fail to get.

THE amount of business done depends very largely on the man at the head.

I MAY be crazy, but I don't play poker with a sky limit.

I MAY be easy but I don't play blackjack with strangers.

I MAY be fastidious but I don't like a squeal through a radio loud speaker.

I MAY be honest, but I don't tell the truth all the time.

I MAY be jolly, but I don't get a big head after it.

COHOE RUN IS GOOD SKIDEGATE Dog Salmon Fewer Than Ever Known: Activities of Fishermen on Islands

SKIDEGATE, Oct. 9.—Cohoe trolling was good at the week end. All the boats averaged one hundred each. The dog salmon run is very poor, the worst that has ever been known.

The halibut boat Point May of Prince Rupert called in to take over 500 cohoes to market for the local trollers.

George Ness, skipper of the Clara N. has been collecting cohoes from the trollers to take over to Prince Rupert.

Captain Nels Larsen and Sam Larsen came in Saturday from the West coast. They report the weather has been very rough and that it has been impossible to do any trolling there.

"Child's Eyelids Inflamed Stuck Together and Bled" Mr. E. P. Kimball, Entwistle, Alta., writes: "Our little girl from birth was troubled with inflamed eyelids and in spite of several remedies, grew worse until at the age of sixteen months her eyes could not be opened after sleep without bleeding, a waxy discharge sticking the lids together and adhering with great tenacity. The child's grandmothers were consulted by mail, and both responded with a little sample box of Dr. Chase's Ointment. These were used as directed, and lasted until we could obtain a further supply from Edmonton. Improvement was very marked from the first application. The waxy discharge was easier removed and did not reappear. Inflammation subsided and has not returned."
