Sport Chat

Even in Prince Rupert excitement was worked up to a degree of tenseness in this year's World Series. Since there never was a series before in which so many tight games were staged, it is a pretty safe statement that the interest in Prince Rupert was only in proportion to that which was manifested everywhere else on the American continent. To the majority of fans, the outcome was apparently satisfactory. The Senators were the favorites because it was the first chance they ever had and human sentiment runs towards seeing the fellow below come to the top. On the other hand, the Giants have won the National League pennant often and have been victors in three world series. In sport like in politics, the masses seem to like a change of government when one side has been in power too long. The scandal involving Giants' players which was bared just before the series started did not benefit the New Yorkers in the public eye. The opinion of the majority of people interesting themselves in Major League baseball is that Wshington won a well-deserved victory.

After all, there is not the same satisfaction in watching a bulletin board that there is in being right on the ground ones' self. When some event in the world o sport is on, there are people in Prince Rupert like everywhere else who wish they were there instad of here. Perhaps there were more fans in this town who wished they were in New York or Washington the last few days than who ever before wished themselves at the venue of some big athletic event. While they were posting the bulletins in Beeself's pool room yesterday, one prominent businessman and sport enthusiast of this city said: "Just think, I have thrown away $25 here and $25 there during the past year. If I had been a little more careful, I might have been able to really see this series. Believe me, I think I will look after the loose change his next year and try to be right at the big show next year."
