770,000 MILES OF SHINGLES

B.C.'s ANNUAL OUTPUT WOULD GIRDLE THE EARTH THIRTY TIMES

The Red Cedar Shingle-Roof Ex-cells All Other in Desirable Qualities

The manufacture of red cedar shingles is a branch of the Forest Industries of British Columbia of outstanding importance. There are 95 shingle mills in this province and in 1923 these plants manufactured 2,500,000,000 shingles to approximate value of $10,000,000.

If laid end to end this yearly cut of shingles would reach over 770,000 miles, or more than 30 times around the earth! Approximately 1,000 feet of lumber is required to make 8,000 shingles.

B.C.'s annual shingle cut would also provide roofs for 125,000 modern residences.

Red cedar grows to the best advantage in British Columbia, which possesses 60 per cent of the world's supply of this wonderful timber. In 1923 the red cedar cut was 573,000,000 ft. Considerably more than half of this amount was used in the manufacture of shingles.

The B.C. shingle industry has an annual payroll of $3,000,000 and employs about 2,600 men, irrespective of those engaged in logging the red cedar for shingle manufacture.

The British Columbia edge-grain shingle makes the most artistic and least expensive roofing there is. Recent independent official fire tests have also established its remarkable freedom from fire risks.

A red cedar roof well laid with proper zinc-coated or pure iron nails, will last half a century. In her red cedar shingle industry British Columbia possesses a wonderful industrial inheritance.

ALBERTA PAPER ON ELECTIONS

Regrets Defeat of Oliver but sees Hope of Government Carrying On.

Discussing the British Columbia political situation, the Edmonton Bulletin says:

British Columbia is in for a period of minority government. While the returns from the general elections are not complete, it is clear that the Oliver ministry cannot hold a majority of the seats in the new Legislature against a combination of opposing groups. There is no suggestion that the ministers will resign, and the prospect is that they will carry on, along such lines as their antagonists may permit. If the government has to seek support outside its own party, the opposition members are split into three factions. That they could unite to form a ministry is doubtful, should the present one be upset. In that, perhaps, lies the hope that the province may avoid a repetition of its political history in the years previous to the accession of Mr. McBride with a dominant majority in the Legislature. In those days the people of British Columbia hardly knew at sundown who would be premier the following morning. It was largely due to popular disgust with political uncertainty and with the kaleidoscopic changes in law and administration which resulted, that Mr. McBride obtained an overwhelming majority in the Legislature and was able to retain almost unlimited power. Whether it is to be chaos or compromise depends upon which the opposition groups choose to make it.

Deserved Better

The Oliver government deserved better treatment. It has been so aggressive and progressive. The outstanding quality of the premier is his readiness to say what he thinks and fight for his opinions. The public never had any doubts as to where he stood upon any question, nor of the sterling honesty of the convictions he proclaimed. But his government inherited a load of responsibilities by no means light. The province is heavily in debt, thanks largely to the former era of "group" government, and taxes are high. The latter was probably the fact that told heavily against the ministers at the polls. The tax-collector is not popular these days, whether or not he is responsible for the magnitude of the bill he has to present.

Alberta Interested

Alberta is directly interested in the results in the neighboring province on two counts. Premier Oliver has been opposed to the restoration of the Crow's Nest Pass freight rate agreement. He has been opposed to the construction of the Brule-Grande Prairie railway. Cheaper rates from the east to prairie points does not better the prospect that Alberta will do more of its importing through Vancouver. And the Brule line would defeat the hope that the E.D. and B.C. may be extended through the mountains to Fort George and the Pacific & Great Eastern unloaded onto the Dominion or the C.P.R. On both issues Mr. Oliver has been characteristically active. If the rebuff he has received will weaken his influence in regard to these questions it is all the less understandable why the people of British Columbia administered it.

Turned Down Beer

There will be interest in this province, too, in noting that the voters turned down a proposal to permit beer to be sold by the glass in licensed places. British Columbia was the first of the "dry" provinces to return to the legalized sale of liquor. But its people have definitely refused to berta has gone.
