CIVIC BANQUET TO THE AIRMEN

Union Jack and Old Glory Entwined at Official Reception to U.S. Army Men

INTERESTING SPEECHES

With Old Glory and the Union Jack unfurled and crossed at the head table and the singing of "God Save the King" and "The Star Spangled Banner" to open and close the proceedings, Prince Rupert's combined official reception and send-off at an enthusiastic and well attended banquet was held last night in St. Regis Cafe. Having been arranged in a hurried manner, the program was more or less of an impromptu nature. There were about 100 citizens present, one representative of the various organizations in the city having been invited.

Mayor Newton presided and seated around him at the head table were Major Martin, flight commander, Lieuts. Smith, Wade Nelson, Arnold and Harding, United States Consul A. E. Wakefield, Jarvis McLeod, local flight representative, the aldermen, S. J. McLeod, president of the Board of Trade, and other prominent citizens were interspersed among the guests from the head table down. The speakers of the evening were Mayor Newton, Major Martin and U.S. Consul Wakefield. Contributing to the program were John E. Davy, Alex. Clapperton and A. R. Hunter with solos and Harold McEwen with a habitant recitation. Music was furnished by an orchestra comprising A. A. Easson, Kenny Reed and W. Vaughan Davies, the latter also being accompanist to the soloists. The blessing was pronounced by Bishop Bunoz. Toasts were proposed to the King and the President of the United States and to Major Martin and his fellow flyers.

Mayor Newton

"We are here tonight as representatives of the various public and semi-public organizations, orders and church influences to bid a semi-public welcome to the air travellers who are in our midst," said Mayor Newton in opening. "Last Sunday, on the arrival of the machines from Seattle, it had been hoped to extend some courtesies in view of the expectation that our guests would not be remaining so long. Though our plans were limited, climatic conditions prevented a matured reception and the city council decided last night that it would be but fitting to show some mark of respect to our visitors. As a result we are here tonight."

Whole City There

"I would explain that this affair was hastily gotten up and, as accommodation was limited, it was necessary to confine ourselves to inviting but one representative of the many organizations in the city and from the number of men you will realize, Major Martin, that we are well supplied with organizations here, even though our air may not be fully metropolitan. Through the representatives of these organizations you have the entire city here to give you a hearty welcome. None of your own people in United States felt more grieved at the slight accident which occurred while you were landing on Sunday than did the people of Prince Rupert. None could have been more sorry that even an accident of the slightest nature should have marred that day's splendid flight under such disadvantageous circumstances. Now we are more pleased that you have come to realize today that the results of that accident were not so serious as you had at first anticipated and that you still have the hope of going off with your fellow flyers as soon as weather permits. (Applause.)

Wishes for Future

"Major Martin, in view of the plans set for tomorrow, is desirous that he and his men may not be detained too long here tonight. As a result our proceedings will be as brief as possible."

"On behalf of every citizen of Prince Rupert, Major Martin, I would like to express our pleasure at having you visit Prince Rupert—the one foreign stop between the two great United States territories. We fervently hope that the remainder of your flight may be uneventful, not even as slight a mishap as that which occurred on Sunday. In that spirit, the citizens of Prince Rupert—one and all—wish you Godspeed and a safe and successful return home from the great adventure upon which you are embarked."

Jolly Good Fellows

After rousing applause which followed His Worship's address, the assembly joined in singing "For they are Jolly Good Fellows" and giving three cheers, a tiger and grizzly bear for the guests of the evening.

Major Martin

Following the toast to himself and his fellow flyers, Major Martin, amid enthusiastic applause, rose to respond. It has certainly been a great pleasure to be with you people of Prince Rupert, he said. At first I did not realize how great the pleasure was going to be. On Sunday it seemed like the whole world was on my shoulders. After having set my heart on this flight, it looked as though every opportunity in the world had gone. While I was landing there on Sunday it looked to me like total disaster. However, all of us are carrying good luck tokens and, while none of us believe in them and would have thrown them overboard on Sunday, I at least have taken heart again. I can promise you that, with one more chance, I will get in no predicament like that again.

"Again let me express the great pleasure it is for us to be here. The spirit of Prince Rupert is simply wonderful. Your willingness to help us, your interest in our undertaking and your cooperation on every possible occasion has been a revelation to us."

Tribute to Wade

Major Martin then went to tell of the intention to leave for Sitka today and outlined the progress of the proposed cruise round the world and home again to Sanja Monica, the starting place. The hop from Seattle to Prince Rupert was one of the three longest on the entire voyage. Expecting good weather conditions on leaving Seattle, the flight, instead of being a pleasant one as anticipated, had proven to be a fight to the finish with more than once the possibility seeming very close that they would have to make an emergency landing enroute. Major Martin paid tribute to the prowess of Ltent. Wade who had come ploughing through by himself, after failing to leave Seattle with the others. Like in other things, the company made confidence in flying and there was always a greater sense of security when planes were flying together, despite the fact that it might be impossible to communicate one means of which every shareholder gets a rebate of fifty cents a ton on his coal and also gets a share of the prospective profits of the company. The new company is to buy its coal from the old one.

J. A. Beaton, the Vancouver druggist, is associated with Mr. Avazoff in this new venture. Major Martin concluded.

Consul Wakefield

Referring briefly on opening to the visit of the late President Harding in Vancouver last summer, which he declared had been an event to cement more closely the love that exists between the two North American nations than any other in history, U.S. Consul Wakefield stated he could only reiterate the expression of pleasure which had been voiced by Major Martin in the magnifi-

Successful Event in Elks' Home

Proved Interesting to Many

The Elks' Home was the scene yesterday of a bazaar held under the auspices of the Ladies of the Royal Purple and in spite of the inclement weather it was very successful.

At three o'clock Mayor Newton was introduced by Ben Self, exalted ruler of the Elks, and he spoke of the work done by the ladies and wished them every success in this and all other undertakings. He declared the bazaar open.
