London Talks About Murder

Story of Finding Remains of Woman in Empty House and Arrest of Man

LONDON, May 29.—All England is discussing the Bungalow Murder case. The dismembered body of a woman was found in an unused bungalow near Eastbourne and an arrest has been made and the accused is before the courts.

A man was detained on suspicion at the cloakroom at Waterloo Station, London, as he was collecting a portmanteau. It appears that some days previous one of the cloakroom attendants noticed a disagreeable smell in the office, and after investigation found that it emanated from a portmanteau, wherein the police afterwards found the blood-soaked underclothing of a woman and a butcher's knife.

Found Body

A watch was kept for the owner or whoever should call for the bag. A man eventually called, and was arrested and closely questioned regarding the bag, its contents, and his movements. From the information supplied no further discovery. Further two officers went at night by motorcar to a lonely stretch of land between Eastbourne and the mystery have otherwise been brought to light. They are a row of cottages, built many years ago to house coastguards. Behind them is a small bungalow, and in if the detectives came up on the dismembered portions of a woman's body. Pieces of flesh were found in brown paper parcels, in torn sheets, and in pieces of rag, while in the grate portions of charred flesh and some bones were found, as well as in the copper in the kitchen. From the remains the head is missing.

Victim a Manchester Girl

The detained man is Patrick Mahon, a resident of Richmond Park, where he had been living with his wife, and the girl has been identified, by the clothing and strongly circumstantial movements, as Miss Emily Beilby Kaye, a secretary, whose last known address was a woman's club hotel in Guildford Street, London. Mahon is charged with the murder of Miss Kaye. Miss Kaye, who was 29 years of age, formerly held secretarial positions in Manchester, where her family resided in her earlier years. About the beginning of last month Miss Kaye wrote to friends of hers with Manchester connections saying that she was going to South Africa to be married. Wireless inquiries have been sent to outgoing liners asking for information.

Miss Kaye stayed at the Kenilworth Hotel, Eastbourne, from April 7 to April 12. The bungalow was rented by a man who arrived there about the beginning of

FRECKLE-FACE

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable concern that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from any druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case. Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine as this strength is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

April, and it is thought that after leaving the hotel Miss Kaye moved into the bungalow, and she was seen walking and driving with the tenant.

Excavations that have been made in the grounds of the bungalow by the police have led to further discovery. Further two officers went at night by motorcar to a lonely stretch of land between Eastbourne and the mystery have otherwise been brought to light. They are a row of cottages, built many years ago to house coastguards. Behind them is a small bungalow, and in if the detectives came up on the dismembered portions of a woman's body. Pieces of flesh were found in brown paper parcels, in torn sheets, and in pieces of rag, while in the grate portions of charred flesh and some bones were found, as well as in the copper in the kitchen. From the remains the head is missing.

Accused's Denial

On Tuesday police court proceedings were opened at Hailsham, when Mahon was formally charged with the wilful murder of Miss Kaye. On being charged Mahon said: "I have already made a statement, and it was not murder, as my statement clearly shows." The statement referred to was made to the police, but its contents have not yet been disclosed. The accused was remanded.

The inquest proceedings were only formal, and the coroner, after taking evidence of the identity of the murdered woman, adjourned the inquiry for four weeks. Mahon, who was present, appeared pale and worried, and when he was taken away later in a closed motor car the large crowd around the bungalow hooted and hissed.

CONSUL SPEAKS TO GYRO CLUB

A. E. Wakefield Spoke Last Night on "Sidelights on International Relationship"

NEW PLAYGROUND SITE APPROVED

The Prince Rupert Gyro Club was addressed at its regular monthly open meeting last night by United States Consul A. E. Wakefield on "Sidelights on International Relationship." In his discourse, which was very interesting, Mr. Wakefield traced the development of the idea of international diplomacy from ancient times to modern. In the days of Greek and Roman world supremacy, envoys were in most cases little more than hostages and they accomplished very little but took great personal risk. It was shortly before the Declaration of American Independence that the present system of international representation had been adopted. The elemental instructions to the diplomatic service of the present day were that in no case should friction be allowed to develop but the representative of a foreign country must always have in sight his country's interests.

Mr. Wakefield referred particularly to the work of Walter Hines Page, United States ambassador to England, during the Great War. He declared that Mr. Page was largely responsible for the maintenance of good relations between Great Britain and the United States during the days of the latter's neutrality. With the lack of understanding between the two countries at that time, Mr. Page's task had indeed been a difficult one but he had filled his post as no other man could have done. The speaker also gave Mr. Page credit with having been an important factor towards the ultimate decision of the United States to enter in its lot against the power that was seeking world domination.

Kindest Interests

Concluding, Mr. Wakefield referred to the kindred interests of the two great Anglo-Saxon nations. What was best for the one was best for the other and there could never be a possibility of outbreak between the two.

Contributing to the musical program of the evening were H. S. Burn with a vocal solo and a quartette consisting of J. E. Davey, Gyro S. K. Campbell, A. E. Wakefield and S. C. Jackson. Gyro W. Vaughan Davies was accompanist.

Toy dogs were presented by Gyro Douglas Stark to Gyros Lew Kergin and Leo Waugh in appreciation of their duties as judges at the recent Gyro dog show.

INTO THE ATTIC

Few youngsters today ever saw a horse-hair sofa. They wouldn't know what to do with a fire taper, carpet stretcher, or coal oil lamp. They couldn't braid rags into a rug, or wind yarn without tangling. But they know the how and why of typewriters, phonographs, telephones, automobiles; what happens when a push of the button gives light, or a kodak's flash fixes their image on paper.

Their education is as modern as the advertisements they see. They have no more use for the lamp and chimney of yesterday than you for the wick and tallow of the day before.

Advertisements induce such progress. They urge wide use that means improvement. They help you lift the out-of-date into the attic—rid you of the water buckets and soap kettles of slavedom. They bring late improvements within your reach.

Read the advertisements regularly. Keep alert to the new.

Without advertising, you would never know a product's worth until you had bought it.
