

"I Suffered Terribly With Sore, Aching Back"
Mrs. Roland Ferguson, 194 Lake St., Peterboro, Ont., writes:

"For over two years I suffered terribly with sore back. I was almost mad with the pain, and had doctored with it until I was discouraged. Then my father, who is a firm believer in Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, advised me to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I followed his advice, and am glad to say I was completely relieved of that torturing pain in my back. It is over a year since I used these pills, and I have had no return of the trouble, but always keep them in the house."

VISITORS ARE SEEING LONDON

Formerly They Went to View the Lunatics at Bedlam and Thought no Wrong
COACHING IS REVIVED
Zoo Was Formerly in Tower of London But Now Transferred to Regent's Park

LONDON, Nov. 6. — People still talk of coming to London "to see the lions," meaning to see the sights, and do not know that the phrase belongs to a time when all strangers went to see the King's Beasts in the Tower of London as a matter of duty. Where we now enter, there once stood an embattled archway known as the Lion Gate, from which a stone bridge led over the moat to the Lion Tower, which with the Middle Tower formed an is and in the Moat. The Lion Tower consisted of a ring of walls enclosing a pit, on which the animals' cages abutted. The "Master of the King's Beasts and Apes" had a dwelling close by.
Zoo at Tower
For nearly 600 years—from 1235 to 1834—London's Zoo was at the Tower. The collection began with a present of three leopards, sent to King Henry III. in 1235 by the Emperor Frederick II., in complimentary allusion to the leopards seen to this day on the royal coat of arms. In the same year a present of a white bear was received from Norway, and accounts are still preserved dealing with the creature's expenses. Fourpence a day (equivalent to several shillings in modern money) was allowed for its food, and other items provided from the King's private purse were a muzzle, an iron chain, and a "long and strong cord to hold him when fishing in the River Thames." The poor prisoner was clearly expected to catch his own food sometimes. In 1255 a house, 40 by 20 feet, had to be provided for an elephant presented by King Louis of France. Towards the end of Queen Elizabeth's reign the collection included three lionesses, a lion, a tiger, a lynx, an English wolf (who must have been about the last of his race), a porcupine and an eagle. But the lions who gave their name to the menagerie were always its leading feature, and in the 18th century there were as many as 11. The present Zoological Gardens took over the last of them in 1834.
Another "Lion"
Little more than a hundred years ago, one of the "lions" of London was—a mental hospital! The Lions, the Tombs (in the Abbey) and Bedlam were considered, even in the 18th century, to make up a suitable program for three lads on a visit to the Capital. People went to Bethlehem Hospital in Moorfields to see the lunatics in exactly the same spirit in which they went to see the wild beasts in the Tower, and about the only restriction on visitors' movements was that they were not allowed to take strong drink or tobacco to the patients. Even so humane and enlightened a person as Dr. Johnson was not too sensitive to walk through the wards, and as for Pepys, who notes that he "stepped into Bedlam, and saw several poor miserable creatures in chains, one of them mad with making verses" it does not seem to have occurred to that genial soul and determined sight-seer that there was anything objectionable about the show—though he describes the then popular sport of bear-baiting as "a rude and nasty pleasure."
Readers of William de Morgan's novel "Alive-for-Short" will remember that the modern Bedlam (Bethlem Royal Hospital) at Lambeth is one of the finest mental hospitals in the world. It is the child of a charity founded in 1247 by Simon FitzMary, sheriff of the City of London, in token of his gratitude for his deliverance from the Saracens when fighting in the Holy Land.
Coach to Brighton
Canadian visitors who want to recapture the "Dickens atmosphere" will be able to do so very soon, by taking a passage on the coach which is about to run from London to Brighton, three days a week. Starting from the "White Horse Cellars" in Piccadilly, the jumping-off place of the old mail-coach service to the west of England, it will do the trip in seven hours. Seven teams will do the journey, changing at the same places as in the old coaching days.
King's Barber
Charles Jasche, who was King Edward's barber for 10 years, and who has been cutting the hair and shaving the chins of the British aristocracy for nearly 40, has just closed down his famous shop in Regent Street, on account of the rebuilding operations there. His saloon, known as the "House of Lords" was patronized by all manner of celebrities, from the Prince of Wales downwards. Visitors from overseas used to make a beeline for the chair with the brass plate that recorded the Prince's first visit.
Mr. Jasche attended King Ed-

Is your wife wiser than you?

IF YOU read only the stock and sporting pages, and your wife is like other women, she is wiser than you. She reads the shopping news.

She likes to hear you jingle money in your pockets. She likes to stretch money to the limit, so she won't have to ask for more. She likes to shop strategically. Know what she does.

Comfortably at home in a cushiony arm-chair, she scans advertising columns. She compares, judges and selects the goods she desires; maps her route; with least effort and minimum time, goes direct to the planned store and buys.

She obtains what she wants at the lowest price it is offered. She is certain of full satisfaction, for she knows advertised goods live up to their claims. She saves time and steps, and returns sufficiently alert to enjoy new advertisements--and to prepare you an appetizing dinner.

These advertisements are written for your benefit too. Read them. Help her help you save.

ward and trimmed his hair and beard on the very day before his death. When the court was at Sandringham he would go there every Sunday; when it was at Balmoral, he journeyed there every ten days. He went to India in the "Renown" with King George, and sailed in the "Ophir" in her cruise of 1901.
Detained
A distinguished visitor from overseas was found wandering the other day in Brixton, a London suburb, and having no visible means of support, was committed to the Zoo! Being a native of East Africa, he was almost dead with cold when taken into custody, but has now recovered, and is doing well on a diet of mealworms. You see, he is a chameleon.
During the holiday month of August the Zoo had no less than 188,478 visitors, taking first place among the popular resorts of London. Kew Gardens came next with 252,419. Hampton Court Palace only records the number of visitors to the State Apartments—116,855; but, as three people are believed to see the gardens for every one who goes through the palace itself, it should be reckoned as second favorite.
