

piloted by Lieut. Leigh Wade in the world flight returning from Great Britain across the Atlantic, was abandoned early today. The Richmond's efforts to salvage the wrecked plane were: abandoned when the machine AMERICAN PLAN which was filling in the rough which was filling in the rough sea capsized. Seeing the hopelessness of attempting further to save it, officers of the ship cut it adrift.

The vessel that found Wade and his mechanic, Staff Sergeant W. H. Ogden, was the British trawler Rugby of Grimsby, England. It states that when the Richmond attempted to hoist the machine out of the water on deck, the steel boom weighing a ton This sent all hopes of the viators crashing.
