For one thing, the smoke from the burning mush in the morning annoys those sleeping in the fo'c'sle and the installation of a fan on the flywheel to blow it out through the portholes, is not working satisfactorily. Another thing on Tom's mind is the speed of the vessel and after much thought he is of the opinion that more could be gained by installing a double screw arrangement. His idea seems to be to have an engine fore and aft. The propeller in front of the boat would pull it and the propeller behind would (Continued on page six)
