BLACKWOOD on Bridge
 By EASLEY BLACKWOOD
 Playing Both People, Cards Important To Win

Bridge humanics—playing the people as well as the cards—enters into every phase of the game. In recent columns we have been discussing the best tactics to use when the opponents have a part score.

I have recommended shading the usual high card requirements a little to open the bidding in those situations. In following this practice, however, it is well to consider your current partner and opponents. Mr. Abel didn't use very good judgment in this respect in today's deal. His partner was Miss Lucy Brash, than whom there is no looser bidder. His opponents were Mr. Dale and Mrs. Keen—not the best, perhaps, but quick doublers and reasonably sound in every department of the game.

In this set-up, Mr. Abel elected to open the bidding on an ace, a king and a queen. Now, Miss Brash, with a void in her partner's suit and with hearts bid right over her, jumped to four spades after Mr. Abel's single raise. If she had bid only three spades she might have got a very fine result as Mr. Dale might not have been willing to double that. And, as you see, it would have been pretty difficult to make either four diamonds or four hearts on the East-West cards. In other words, Miss Brash might have got to play three spades, down two, only 100 points. Against the actual four spade bid, Mr. Dale opened the tray of diamonds which was ruffed on the board. The king of clubs was led on which Miss Brash pitched a small diamond. Mr. Dale won with the ace and returned the queen of diamonds. Again dummy ruffed.
