PRINCE OF WALES BROKE COLLAR BONE WHEN THROWN FROM HIS HORSE

Prince of Wales Broke His Collar Bone Today as Thrown from Horse

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The Prince of Wales broke a collar bone this morning while exercising one of his hunters at Billington manor near Ascot.

The Prince was putting his mount over a fence when the horse fell, throwing the Prince heavily on his shoulder. The Prince got up and was about to remount when the equerry said: "I believe you have broken your collarbone."

"Yes, I have," the Prince replied.

The Prince was given treatment in a surgery at Leighton Buzzard from which he emerged with his shoulder in bandages but smiling. He has eighteen hunting horses at Leighton Buzzard and expected to follow the hounds often. He returned to London later and went to bed at St. James Palace.

FALLS BENEATH A MOVING TRAIN

P. D. Connolly of Anyox Meets With Fatal Accident and Dies From Effects

(Special to Daily News)

ANYOX, Feb. 8.—What proved to be a fatal accident befell P. D. Connolly on Tuesday last. Connolly, who was a young man in his early twenties, attempted to board a train while it was in motion and missed his step, falling under the wheels, which passed over him, crushing his limbs badly, his death resulting on Thursday. The body is being sent south to Vancouver, where his people reside. Connolly worked some time for the Granby Company several years ago, after which he left for other parts, returning to Anyox some months since from Premier, where he had been employed.

D. McIven, deputy minister of labor, who spent two weeks investigating the trouble in the strike area.

MAN PART OF BIGGER WHOLE

Archbishop Du Vernet Says Conventional Morality Utterly Inadequate For Today

COMMUNITY SERVICE

No Man Can be Saved Alone Without the Community

Stating that he agreed with those who considered the conventional morality as set forth in the commandments was utterly inadequate to meet the ethical problems of today, Archbishop DuVernet, in a scholarly address delivered last night at the men's annual banquet, urged that there must be a realization that every person was simply a part of a "bigger whole." Men were today demanding of leaders of thought something greater than one of "don't." There was a new approach to a difficult subject. The key to the problem was to bring about the right adjustment of the individual to the bigger whole.

People could not live self-centred lives. While every individual was a centre of his own in the universe and regarded the world from the standpoint of his own experience, it should also be considered from the standpoint of the bigger whole. As had been said, an individual was only true when he found a cause bigger than himself to which he could devote himself. A man must make the bigger cause his own of his own free choice and must devote himself to it. If he were disloyal to this cause he was a traitor to himself.

FURORE OVER ALLEGED PACT CONTINUES IN SPITE OF PROTESTS

LONDON, Feb. 8.—It is understood the Unionist leaders, in view of the verdict in the recent elections, have resolved to eliminate the full protectionist program from the party platform.

Newspapers here this morning again devote their principal columns to the "secret Rhineland pact" story.

Anxiety was admitted yesterday in government quarters lest the Anglo-French relations receive a setback. The Times says "Somebody bungled, that's all. The world will shrug its shoulders and pass on. What Lloyd George thinks or formerly thought on the Rhine policy matters little now."

Other papers regret that so much was made out of so little. Sympathy is offered to Premier Macdonald for having been dragged into the unpleasant incident. Spender nevertheless sticks to the absolute accuracy of his statement.

OLD AND NEW FORT GARRY

THE story of the Winnipeg forts of the early fur-trading days—Rouge and Gibraltar—most interesting that could be found anywhere. When Verendrye came to the junction of the Red and Assiniboine Rivers in 1738 he established Fort Rouge. The Northwest Company, sixty years later, established Fort Gibraltar and a few years later Fort Douglas, named after Thomas Douglas, the fifth Earl of Selkirk, was constructed by the Hudson's Bay Company. Many stories are told of conflicts between the servants of the Hudson's Bay and North-West Companies, but the feud terminated with the amalgamation of the two companies in 1821, and the first Fort Garry was erected as a trading post and settlers' depot.

This was an elaborate structure with stone walls, bastions and port-holes.

On 1831 the building of Lower Fort Garry, 19 miles down the river was commenced. This was for a time the residence of the Governor of Rupert's Land and the seat of government. In 1835 Upper Fort Garry was begun at the junction of the two rivers and this was the centre of business, government, education and public affairs for more than 30 years, and was the nucleus of the present city of Winnipeg.

The Fort was sold in 1882 and the front gate, now owned by the city and standing beside the new Fort Garry, the hotel of the Canadian National Railways, is all that remains of this historic group of buildings.

Grain Commissioners ask for Grain Survey Board and Grain Act Revision; Old Act Obsolete

VANCOUVER, Feb. 8.—The demand for a grain board in Vancouver and the revision of the Grain Act which is declared to be obsolete because it was drafted before Alberta became a grain growing province and takes no cognizance of the fact that a western grain route exists, featured the first session of the board of grain commissioners here.

The points brought out were that Calgary interests have protested against the placing of a survey board here, thus preventing the immediate granting of the request that grain elevator companies are not passing in to the farmers the saving effected by using the western route.

H. H. Stevens declared he would press for complete revision of the Grain Act at the next session of parliament.

Neighborliness and Frankness to put to Shame Armies, Navies and Poison Gas says Macdonald

LONDON, Feb. 8.—Premier Ramsay Macdonald is understood to be firmly convinced that appeals to the sense of justice, reason and the higher instincts of the nations would do more to restore the peace of the world than the maintenance of armies and navies. It is understood that he favors the shelving of the project of a naval base at Singapore until these principles are tried out. "Common honesty, neighborliness and frankness" between nations, the Premier believes, will yet be applied in the settlement of international disputes and put to shame huge armies, fleets, airplanes and poison gas.

Waves Dash over S.S. Amur Ashore Twenty Miles South of Here

Coastwise Steamship & Barge Co.'s ore carrying steamer Amur, northbound from Vancouver Island to Anyox, is high ashore in a precarious condition on a reef at the southeast end of White Cliff Island near the mouth of the Skeena River about 20 miles south of here according to word brought to the city by D. S. Cameron, fisheries overseer, who arrived from down the coast on the departmental gas boat Bonilla at 10.30 this morning. The Bonilla passed the Amur at 8.30 o'clock this morning and brought a message from the captain of the distressed vessel asking for assistance. The Canadian Fish & Cold Storage Co.'s schooner Zibassa Capt. Candow, went ashore on the high tide at 12.30 noon in answer to the message and will stand by to give the Amur such assistance as may be required to get her off the rocks if it is possible to do so.

Up on High Tide

Mr. Cameron reported this afternoon that the Amur apparently went ashore on the high tide about 2 o'clock this morning. This he judges from her high position on the reef. Owing to the storm that was prevailing when the Bonilla hove to at the scene of the stranding it was impossible to hear the shouts of the captain and all that could be done was to exchange signals. Mr. Cameron believes that the Amur may have been blown ashore in the fury of the gale that was raging early this morning. A barge loaded with coal which the Amur was towing is also ashore. The Amur's stern was under water and her bow projecting high into the air. Mr. Cameron is of the opinion that if the vessel is not rescued within a very short time it will be impossible to save her at all. The Bonilla was too small to render any assistance though an attempt was made to do so. The Amur and her tow appear to be sitting tight on the rocks but the vessel is getting the full force of the storm which is raging and the seas are washing over her. The crew was still aboard when the Bonilla left but the vessel was in such a position that they could easily walk to safety on White Cliff Island.

Only Help Available

On arrival here Mr. Cameron notified the customs authorities of the Amur's plight and wires have been sent to the owners of the vessel and salvage outfits in the south for instructions. The Zibassa was the only boat obtainable at the time to send to the Amur's relief. She took tow lines with her and will probably make an attempt at once to pull the vessel off.

It was a difficult matter for Mr. Cameron to judge just the extent of the damage to the steamer and her tow. It is likely, however, that holes have been punched in both. No direct communication is possible with the Amur herself for she is not equipped with wireless telegraphy.

Well Known Vessel

The Amur is one of the best known steamers plying in northern waters. Formerly owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway Coast Steamship Co., she was one of the first vessels to ply into Prince Rupert in the freight and passenger service back in 1907 and 1908. As a freighter, she has been a frequent caller here ever since. A few years ago she was acquired by the Coastwise Steamship & Barge Co. and has been engaged in ore carrying between Anyox, Stewart and Tacoma making calls here at intervals with cargoes such as coal from the south. She was built in 1890 at Sunderland, Great Britain, and was a collier before being brought to Canada by the C.P.R. She is 907 tons gross, 570 tons registered, is 216 feet long, 28 ft. 1 in. beam and 17 ft. 9 in. deep. She is a steel boat and has 150 horse power engines.
