Doings of the Mosquito Fleet which is the chief source of Prince Rupert's prosperity

The permanent staffs of the Booth, Royal and Pacific fisheries have already made their close season efforts noticeable around the respective fish plants. The box trucks and mechanical fittings look tip-top under a coat of battleship grey paint while the woodwork has not been overlooked in the renovating process. It is a case of spring cleaning in the winter but is nevertheless having satisfactory results. Fish box lumber is being piled to the roof. The right and left handed hammers and nails will

Big Blow Saturday

One of the strongest gales experienced for some time struck the waterfront on Saturday last. The Cow Bay float, carrying in it a strenuous time and it kept all hands busy holding the boats down and preventing damage. The Prince Rupert Yacht club floats came in for a severe time also and the general assistant, Commodore, Chiff Thompson, said that he had got more excitement out of the gale than watching a girl get her hair bobbed. E. H. Mortimer's boat ran amuck and tried to push the yacht club wharf down to the Art Oswald is equipping his boat Tootie with new deck rails and gurdy and otherwise giving her the once over, while the schooner Gibson has been dismantled and tied securely in Cow Bay Creek. Capt. Blondel has just finished giving the Joe Baker a thorough overhaul. The craft now looks resplendent in a coat of white paint and with her hull re-caulked is all set for any future fields of exploration. Capt. may decide upon.

Joe Brown Fishes

It was Joe Brown's lucky piscatorial day on Thursday and for the sake of advertising the tourist possibilities of the city it was a pity no tourists were on hand to take in the sport. Joe, needing a little relaxation, took up an advantageous position on the provincial wharf early in the morning and armed with a line and hook was soon enjoying an attempt at flounder fishing. However, the flounders did not seem to be floundering very well and for a while things were a bit dull. Just as he was giving up hope Joe felt a strong tug on the hook and ran into the Provincial dock office to tell the boys he could hear a bite but it sounded like something in the whale class, and that the line felt as tight as a banjo string. The gang turned out a la Toonerville fashion and helped to give a heave on the line. Then the fun started, amid yells and cheers they landed a hefty bull headed looking fish which some old timers said was a mud shark. However, Joe kept his head all through the excitement and after dismissing his helpers decided to stay a little longer. It was a good lunch for the piscatorial artist was soon landing fish of every description including cod, flounder, and bass while several halibut had to be thrown back again to conform with the close halibut treaty regulations. So heavy was the catch that Joe's hooks wore out and he returned to the fray after lunch with a fresh supply sufficient to enable him to nearly fill one of his spacious taxis with a miscellaneous catch of marine monsters.

Pigs is Pigs

There was free pork for the catching on the provincial dock on Saturday last and the fun was fast and furious for a few minutes. A consignment of pigs arrived from the south on the Princess Beatrice, all nicely crated and consigned to the Oriental piggery on Eleventh Avenue. The crates had all been landed in an efficient manner and were being transferred to the dock shed when the tragedy happened. A nail became unseated and released a stay in one of the crates which was the signal for the pigs to make their getaway. Soon there was a wild scramble and headed by "Doc" Clapperton with a club the boys gave chase. However, a pig can run some if only blessed with four legs and it was a merry chase around the wharf. The steamer passengers enjoyed the fun immensely and should have been charged a grandstand admission. After much puffing and blowing on the part of both the pursuers and the "grunters" the latter were eventually cornered and Doc was left to stand guard over them with a club while the remainder of the pig chasers hunted up some wood and nails. The choice bacon was finally put in a new crate and sent on its way rejoicing.

The seagulls are wearing a worried look along the docks and seem to miss their fishermen friends. So lonely have they become for human friendship that flocks of them fly up town in the daytime and sit across the street watching their good nautical friends play rummy.
