CANADIANISM GYRO SUBJECT

W.E. Williams Deplores Lack of Confidence in Home Investments Addressing Gyro Club

FOLLOW U.S. POLICY

W. E. Williams addressed the Gyro Club last evening on "Canadianism." Showing how the Dominion had gradually evolved from the position of a crown colony twenty-five years ago to that of a near-nation today, the speaker drew attention to some of the responsibilities resting with the people of Canada in the way of government and development. He felt that the means of educating immigrants from foreign countries in Canadian customs and ideals was not broad enough in scope. If this matter were not taken in hand, there was danger that in a few years foreign rather than Anglo-Saxon principles might prevail. Canada which should be an independent nation but always with an Anglo-Saxon sentiment, could best serve its own interests and those of the Empire by making good Canadians of all its citizens. This was work that could effectively be undertaken by all the communities. The policy of the United States might be emulated in this regard. Drawing the great mass of its population today from foreign countries, the United States had made 100 per cent Americans of these people. Similarly it should be done in Canada.

Invest at Home

The speaker deplored the lack of confidence that Canadians, through their investments, had shown in their own country. To make Canada a great nation, population was required but to support this population it was necessary that there should be industrial development. Too much attention, he thought, had been paid to agriculture. True this was the great basic industry of the Dominion but it also had unlimited natural resources which should be turned into finished products through manufactures in the country. Five men might take out million feet of logs in a year but it would take twenty men to turn that timber into furniture. Why export the timber and lose the work of the fifteen men in Canada? The speaker declared that Canadians had plenty of money to invest in manufacturing and other development projects which would prove profitable. It was a fact that many Canadians were to be found in executive positions with industrial concerns in the United States. Why not start manufacturing in Canada and keep these Canadians at home?

Home Projects

Localizing his theme, Mr. Williams referred to projects that, with a small amount of capital, might be started by the people of Prince Rupert themselves. He would have liked to have seen an elevator financed by Prince Rupert people. He felt that it could be done. Too much pessimism had developed here in the face of the fact that Prince Rupert offered more prospects than perhaps any other city of Canada. Co-operation and friendship among the citizens should be developed instead of factional strifes and jealousy. If one citizen of Prince Rupert prospered it could not but have a beneficial effect on the others. If everybody was interested in the other person a spirit should be developed that would be beneficial to all. Citizens should trust and help each other and thus, co-operating, do their part towards building up the city which meant building up Canada. If the proper spirit prevailed, he felt that an era of growth would ensue in the city that would relatively exceed that of any other city in Canada for Prince Rupert was abundantly endowed with all the necessary natural attributes.

Musical Program

Besides Mr. Williams' address, the club's program for the evening included selections by an orchestra consisting of Miss St. Cyr, A. A. Easson and George Rorie, jr. Master William Murray played a violin solo accompanied by W. Vaughan Davies. Community singing was led by Gyro Lionel Holtby.

Guests of the club included Norman Bell and L. B. Cook of Vancouver; Walter Gale, Jack Edwards and W. O. Fulton.
