Premier Protests at British Government for Keeping Him in Dark

OTTAWA, July 17.—There was an angry scene in the House of Commons this morning when Premier Mackenzie King was being questioned regarding the representation of Canada at the inter-allied conference. He outlined the communications that had passed between Ottawa and London and intimated that the Canadian government was awaiting further advices from the British government, when Arthur Meighen, leader of the opposition, read a press dispatch bearing on the conference. Premier King replied that he had not seen the dispatch, adding "I want the House to know and I want the British government to know that we are receiving information as to what is happening in regard to Canadian representation from press dispatches read by the leader of the opposition." Premier King protested against the press getting information regarding what was taking place which was not given to the government of the country, and which the government was not in a position to reply to.

The session is nearing its end as most of the important business has now been completed. The visit of the Prince Rupert Elks to Ketchikan is getting a lot of publicity in the press of that city and apparently a great deal is expected of the local minstrel company. The ball game should prove an interesting one.

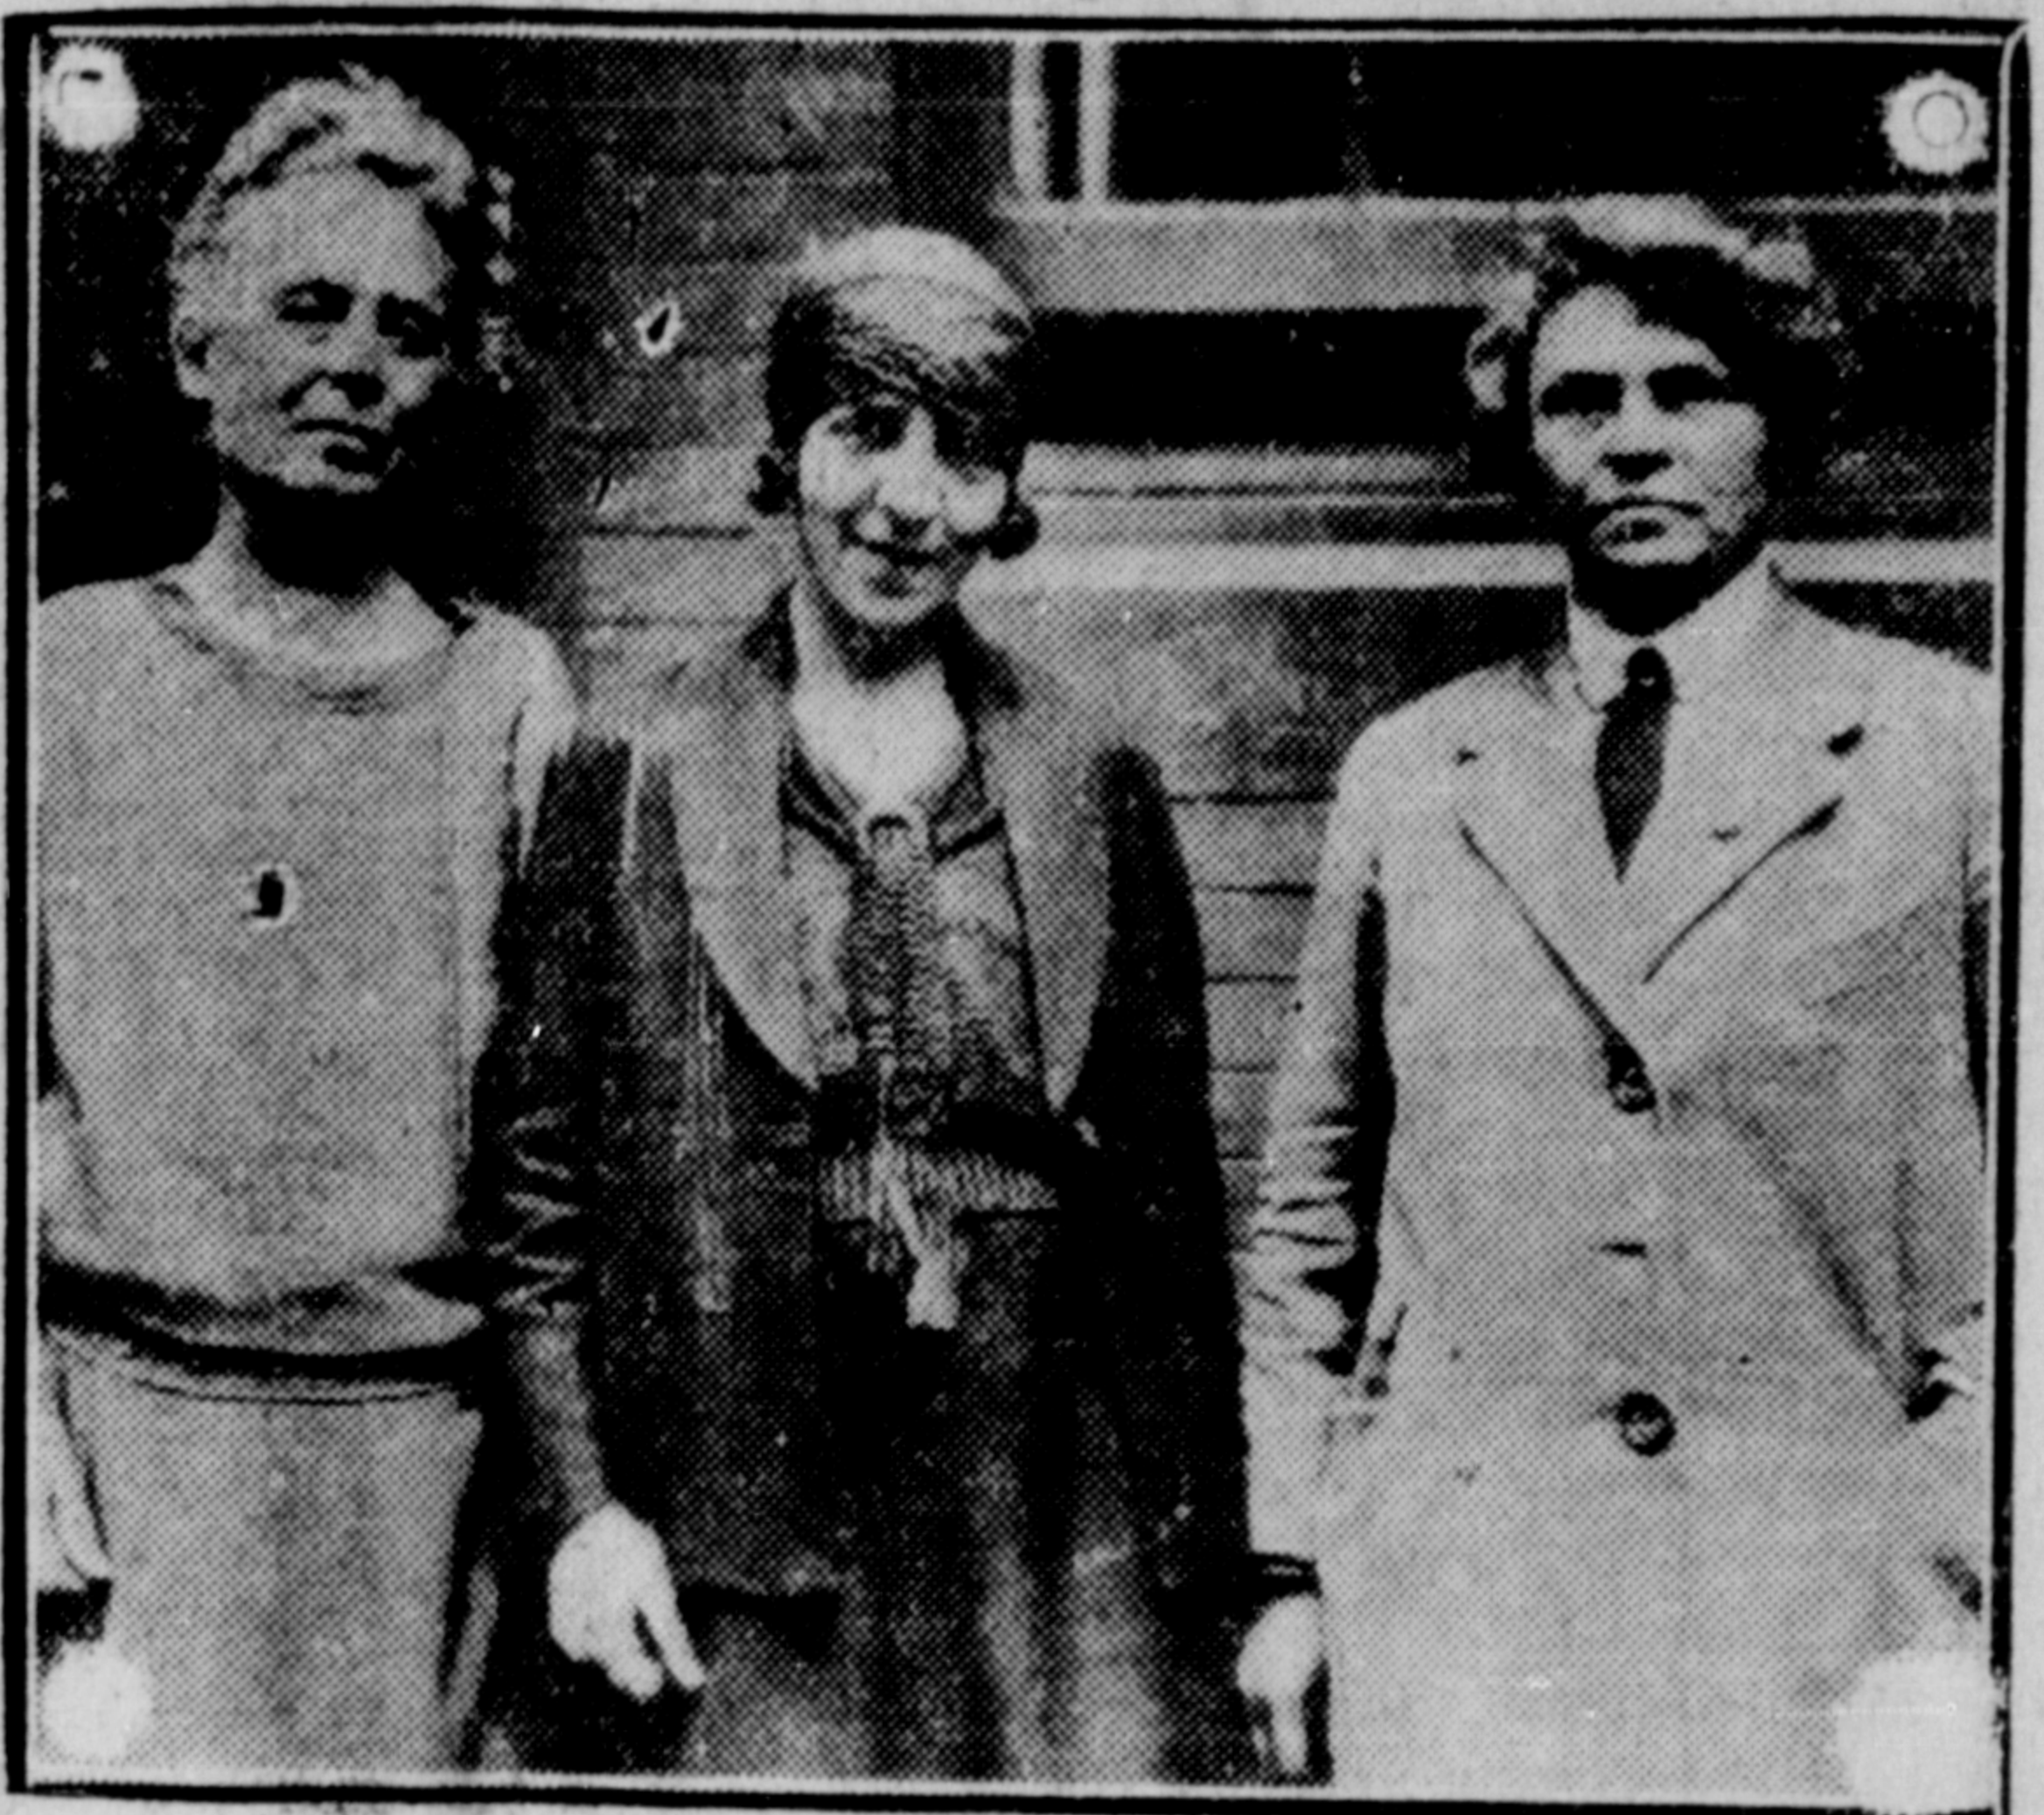

FISH BUYER IS HELD UP

Robbed of $500 by Two Bandits at Juneau One of Whom was Masked

Two men, one masked, held up Ole Jackson, aboard the gas-boat Jiggs, shortly after midnight in Auk Bay at Pelton Cove, and made their escape with $500 which Jackson had in a sack to purchase from trollers, says the Juneau Empire. Jackson telephoned the information of the hold-up and robbery to town last night and reported it to the United States District Attorney's office this morning and officers are now making a search for the two sea bandits.

Ole Jackson, who is a buyer for H. R. Thompson, of Juneau, left on the Jiggs from the city dock about six o'clock last evening going over the bar to Pelton Cove where he anchored for the night. About 7 o'clock, Jackson turned in ready to make an early start this morning for Hoonah and adjacent places to purchase fish from trollers. Sometime between midnight and one o'clock this morning, Jackson was awakened by the door of the cabin being opened and immediately a gun was stuck in his face. The holder of the gun, who had a handkerchief tied across his face, pulled a flash light, cast the rays about the cabin and saw a bag of money containing the $500 on a table, seized it and passed it out to a waiting companion on the dock. Jackson was warned to keep perfectly still. The masked man took a hot-shot battery from the engine and threw it overboard. Jackson asked him what he did that for and the masked man replied: "I missed you the last time."

The masked man backed out of the cabin, sprang into a skiff and disappeared down the bight and in the direction of Spuhn Island. Jackson asked him what he did that for and the masked man replied: "I missed you the last time."

Stuart MacLaren Still Missing, but Believed to have Landed Safely

TOKIO, July 17.—Although no news had been received up to this afternoon of Squadron-leader Stuart MacLaren and party, British round-the-world flyers, no anxiety is felt here as to their safety. It is believed likely that they landed at some intermediate point in the Kuriles far from radio or other communication with the outside world. Broughton Bay, Shimushiro Island, where the advance party for the flight laid down a fuel supply base, is believed to be the most probable point of landing. Japanese destroyers have been searching without finding a trace of the missing plane. The party includes, besides MacLaren, Flying Officer Plenderleith, Sergeant Andrews and Lieut.-Col. Broome who joined the party when it left Japan. It was Col. Broome who laid down the supply depots.

PATTULLO URGES TO MORE PIONEERING

Men He Thinks Should Leave Cities and Strike Out For Themselves

VICTORIA, July 17.—In a spirited address here, Hon. T. D. Pattullo, minister of lands, maintained that British Columbia was the finest place on earth for the young man. He urged more young men to leave the cities and do a little pioneering, claiming that in this way many who would otherwise be working for wages twenty years hence could accomplish big things for themselves. The minister said there was room for thousands of prospectors. If he were a young man, he said, nothing would suit him better than to tie up to an experienced prospector and hit for the hills. The lumbering industry held good openings for the young man who would go into the woods and learn the business thoroughly. He could own a mill of his own in due time. "Fishermen operating out of Prince Rupert are getting rich," said Hon. Mr. Pattullo. "And there is room for lots more. Working on the land today is a picnic compared with the days of the pioneer."

(Special to Daily News) ATLIN, July 17.—Considerable development work is now going on at the Engineer Mine. A 900 foot tunnel to connect with the main workings at a level of 80 feet above the lake is nearly completed, and work has been started on a 50 ton stamp mill, which it is expected will be finished within two months. Preparations for the development of a water power, and the construction of a power line are also under way. As this mine, although only developed in a small way so far, has produced some very rich high-grade ore, big things are looked for when mining operations are in full swing.

OLD ENGLISH HOMES ALLOWED TO DECAY

LONDON, July 16.—Sir Rider Haggard writes to The Times deploring that the roofs of old English country mansions are rotting and falling in because the owners cannot afford to keep them up and there is no one to buy them, and that with them disappears the old English country life of which they were the center. The contents of these old houses are being poured into the market as they have never done before, and popular belief is that most of these valuables are bought in by London art dealers for their American customers.
