Armistice Day
For Seventh Time.

This is the sixth anniversary of Armistice Day and once again Prince Rupert people join with the rest of the people of the British Empire and the allied and associated nations in bringing to remembrance the great deeds done in defence of the ideal of democracy. In the war many lost sons, brothers, fathers or more distant relatives. None wholly escaped. Of those who returned many bear with them the marks of the great conflict. Life was held cheap at that time and the cry was every day for more men, and those the very best the nation could supply. They went freely, and today is the anniversary of the closing of the big fight. Since that time people have been gradually readjusting themselves to the changed conditions. As we look back over the past seven years we see that the change has been gradual but sure. Yet we shall never go back to the conditions as they were before 1914. Possibly the war was one of the steps in the evolution of the race. The human mind is expanding in its scope but it still is unable to grasp the really big things of the world and to consider them in their relative importance.

Nature Not Careful
Of Teeming Life.

Nature has never been careful of life. In the sea one creature eats another from the smallest to the largest. In giving birth to new life millions of salmon die annually in the rivers and lakes of the country. During a bad season the wild things die and during the fruitful season they thrive and increase. Floods, fires, earthquakes, all take their toll of life and plagues are common. Compared with some of the ravages of nature, the deaths from the war were not numerous. It is said that more people died from Spanish Influenza during the few months at the time of the close of the war, than from the whole four years of fighting. From this it will be seen that as a world event the war was not as great an event as we sometimes consider it to be.

It was the greatest war in history but the death list was comparatively small.

Big To Individual
Small To Nature.

If the war was only an incident in the steady progress of Nature, it was big to those who took part in it and to those whose loved ones lost their lives there. To many the war was everything and they still mourn for loved ones although the mourning is hallowed by time and the grief has lost its bitterness.

It is well for us all to look back once a year and consider the sacrifices our young men made and the grief our women bore uncomplainingly. The lessons of the war are getting less insistent as time passes but they are brought to our notice annually with extreme vividness. The poppies remind us of the bloody battle fields and of our duty to those who suffered.

Get Out Of Doors
Whenever Possible.

We are creatures of habit and during the bad weather get the habit of staying indoors. When fine weather arrives we do not all turn out to enjoy it as we should.

Some people form the habit of going outdoors some time every day, rain or shine, and then when the weather changes they're in a position to take advantage of it. This brings their health and vigor and adds to the length of life and also to its enjoyment.

GOOD NEWS FOR BRONCHITIS SUFFERERS!

Deep-Seated Chest Troubles Yield to PEPS.

BRONCHITIS lays hold of the chest in a slow insidious way. Do not, therefore, neglect to take prompt measures to counteract the first symptoms of this ravaging ailment—the first difficulty in breathing, the occasional made-up feeling in the throat with its accumulations of phlegm. Be warned by that irritating cough and those frequently returning colds.

Get a box of Peps, the well-known breathing remedy. After removing the silver wrapping place a Peps tablet on the tongue and breathe in the healing fumes as the tablet dissolves.

Peps are simply invaluable for allaying that teasing, tickling cough; for softening and loosening the phlegm, and soothing the irritated and semi-inflamed bronchial tubes. Every day as you breathe in the powerful germicidal fumes which are emitted from these Peps, a healing influence is extended deep into the lungs where liquid cough mixtures cannot penetrate.

PEPS The Great Breathable Remedy

LUMBER AND ITS SALE

The disposal of the low grade material produced by our sawmills is a very serious problem confronting the lumbermen of British Columbia. It is a factor which must on no account be left out of consideration when measuring the ability of the industry to absorb heavy royalty charges on standing timber.

Our more fortunate competitors in Washington and Oregon possess substantial local markets for their low grade sawmill products. The proximity of their plants to large manufacturing centres and the facilities they possess for shipping by rail and water to their home markets enable them to participate profitably in the production of low quality lumber.

In B.C., on the other hand, there are very restricted opportunities for the disposal of low grade material owing to lack of population and heavy freight charges to lumber buying centres.

Three direct results of British Columbia's weakness in this respect are:

- 1.—A lower gross yield per acre.
- 2.—A higher cost of production.
- 3.—A lower margin of profit to the operator.

It is clear that if the premier industry of this Province is to be carried on successfully it must be maintained on a basis that will permit it to compete with neighboring districts producing actually the same softwood species.

No settlement of the British Columbia Timber Royalties question will be finally satisfactory, either to the public or the industry itself, that does not encourage British Columbia to yield more timber and manufacture it more economically.

Ten Years Ago
in Prince Rupert

November 11, 1914.

A delegation from the Prince Rupert Ministerial Association conferred with the police commission yesterday afternoon respecting the question of the segregated area. They were against its being allowed to exist. It is likely that before long a test of public opinion will be taken on the subject. The delegation consisted of Canon G. A. Rix and Rev. A. F. Dimmick.

Mayor Newton left this morning for Terrace having been invited there by garden and truck farm producers to discuss matters of mutual benefit to citizens and farmers through the City Market.

The Canadian Pacific Railway announces that the crack liner Princess Charlotte will be put on the Alaska run next year. There will be a large tourist traffic, it is anticipated.
