

PUBLIC MEETING THURSDAY WILL DISCUSS FISHERIES AND DRYDOCK AND OTHER PUBLIC MATTERS HERE.

ginning to wonder who really were the enemies of Prince Rupert. These and other matters they would like to discuss.

Mayor Answers

Mayor Newton said he was agreeable to calling such a meeting if the council so desired. He had promised that public meetings would be called and had in fact, he did call two or three meetings to take up various local aspects. At each of these meetings there had been a mere handful of people and the idea had been given the "cold blanket." He had felt that, since that was the way the citizens felt about matters affecting the city, there was no use in calling further meetings. Only a few weeks ago the Deep Sea Fishermen's Union had written a letter to the city council regarding the price of halibut. A meeting of the joint committees of the city council, board of trade, boat owners and Union was called to go into the matter. Only Ald. Smith, Ald. Larsen, H. M. Daggell and himself (the mayor) had turned up. Despite this, however, he would be in sympathy with any proposal that the council would make to get results.

Against City

Speaking further on the matter of boat repairs here, Ald. Casey said that he believed Fred Stork, M.P., Mr. Graham, the minister of railways, and Premier King were desirous and anxious to see port development here and would give Prince Rupert "a square deal or a little more." However, he felt that the railway directorate was right against the city. He believed that, if an indignation meeting were held and a protest presented to Premier King, Mr. Graham and Mr. Stork, the railway board might get a "jacking up." If the Canadian National Railway, in the interest of economy, bought a boat in the Old Country and had to effect alterations costing $80,000, why, in the interest of economy, was that work not also done in the Old Country? If it was to be done after the boat arrived on the coast, then why was the work taken to Vancouver instead of being done in the company's own dry dock at Prince Rupert? Was somebody receiving a rake-off in taking the work to Vancouver? "I do believe there is some crooked work going on and that Premier King and Mr. Graham should be apprised of it," concluded Ald. Casey. "Then Sir Henry Thornton and his gang of directors might get a jacking up."

Suffered Indignity

Mayor Newton said that it was just such things as these he had attempted to put up to Sir Henry Thornton on his last visit to the city. After having been compelled to suffer some indignity, he (the mayor) had finally got a hearing from Sir Henry in his private car. Asked about the building of a boat here, Sir Henry had said that it was intended to ask parliament to authorize the building of two boats instead of one. Even the two ship theory seemed now to have been blasted.

Speaking in support of Ald. Casey's suggestion, Ald. Larsen felt that if the meeting were called the mayor need not be afraid of there being an empty house. There were sixty fishermen in the city who were facing starvation. The fishermen were always willing to meet the city council and the Retail Merchants' Association but they were not willing to meet a committee of the Board of Trade consisting of fish buyers. That attitude applied to the Boat Owners' Association as well as the Union members. The meeting referred to by the mayor, in any case, had not been advertised as a public meeting.

The motion was then carried and Mayor Newton announced that he would call the meeting for 8 o'clock Thursday night in the city council chamber.

On recommendation of the utilities committee, the city council decided last night to request the Canadian National Railways to carry across their property a pipe line to supply industrial plants at Cow Bay. This comes out of the applications of P. Burns and others to the city for water connection.

LITTLE ELSE BUT TALK AT OTTAWA AMONG MEMBERS ON BOTH SIDES ON BUDGET: NO ELECTION THIS YEAR.

question of amendments to the British North America Act, as announced in the speech from the throne at the opening of the session, for the purpose, particularly, of effecting some reform of the Senate. Neither of these moves would conceivably be made if the government had in mind rushing into a general election at the conclusion of the present session.

Again, as was pointed out in the House last week by George W. Kyle, chief government whip, it does not look like a pre-election session when the Conservatives have omitted to call a single sitting of the Public Accounts Committee to investigate any of the expenditures of the present government since it came into power nearly four years ago. Despite protestations of various Conservative speakers in the budget debate, nothing is more certain than that the official opposition does not want an election this year. And it is doubtful if any section of the country wants the expense and turmoil of an election until the expiry of the regular constitutional time in the autumn of next year.

Refutes Blue-Ruin Talk

An important contribution to the budget debate in the week just closed was that of Hon. James Murdock, minister of labor, who read into the records some convincing evidence of the falsity of the blue-ruin cries of the Conservatives both in the House and out of it. He showed that unemployment was worse in the United States than in Canada; that the alleged list of failures in Canada as prepared by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and quoted from freely by Mr. Meighen was sadly inaccurate and full of indications of padding to suit the purposes of those who are demanding higher protection. He showed, too, that a great deal had been actually accomplished by the present government in reducing the cost of living, and produced official statistics to support his contention. He concluded with a warm rebuff to Sir Henry Dray-

I am carrying out my duty to my constituency and to the country. I do not want to have it inferred that I am in any way governed by political influences. But I believe that it is in the best interests of the country that the budget should be supported, although I know that some of my friends with whom I associate at the present time do not agree with this view. It must be remembered, however, that conditions in the province from which I come are extremely different from those in other parts of the country; it has been recognized as a concession to myself and other members from British Columbia that we have certain conditions there that do not exist anywhere else. For this and other reasons that I have stated I shall have no hesitation in giving what support I can to the budget.
