Archdeacon Rix Writes of Visit to Naas River Villages and of Trip up the Turbulent River

A few days ago mention was made in this paper that Archdeacon Rix, administrator of the diocese, had visited the Naas River. The Archdeacon had a wonderfully interesting time and he tells about it in an article which he has written himself as follows:

The first two weeks of June I spent along the Naas River and a description of that work may be interesting to the readers of the Daily News.

The party consisted of the Indian Agent, W. E. Collison; the Indian constable, E. G. Newnham; W. B. Anderson, a government expert on horticulture; and myself. We left Mill Bay at the mouth of the river in an Indian gas boat called "The Nightingale" and started up what was really a great river owing to the spring floods. The current was very strong but the sturdy little 40 horse power engine made slow but steady headway against it. Interesting spots were pointed out. "The Devil's Walking Stick," a huge bare pinnacle upside down. Then as we passed a peculiar round shaped rock in mid-stream, the native boatman informed me it was said by the natives to be "the heart of the Naas."

Deserted Village

Twelve miles from Mill Bay we passed the deserted village of Gitihs, where only one house and three totem poles remain. Opposite this deserted village is an ancient inscription made by some tribe many decades ago. It is still fresh and clear after being beaten by wind and rain and storm for perhaps hundreds of years, bearing testimony to the durability of the old mineral paints used by these people. We soon passed Lakkalzup but left our visit there until the return journey.

At last we reached the Gwinia Canyon and those who go up or down this in a boat during the spring flood will not soon forget the experience. The ascent was thrilling and even dangerous and only such a splendid man as the wheel as the native, James Smythe, would make it possible to make it. But we did make it, a testimony to the boat and its skipper and his sturdy son Leander. The old village of Gwinia with the exception of one house has been moved to higher ground on the other side of the river.

Twelve miles above the canyon is what remains of Aiyanshi. Just a few houses and one family and these will, both houses and family, probably soon be moved to Git-Lak-damiks. We arrived about 8 p.m. at this place and were met at the landing by a large number of the people, among whom was the Rev. Oliver Thorne, about whom and Mrs. Thorne let me say I do not think there could be found anywhere two people who could do better work than these devoted people are doing.

Not a Complaint

Here was a mission content and happy and without a complaint so far as the religious side of life was concerned, and why should they be otherwise, with such leadership and with a church and church army hall such as few white towns or even cities have. The service on Sunday would be a surprise and revelation to people from England and Eastern Canada.

A beautiful church lit by electricity, well furnished, a fine stained glass window in the chancel and a good choir. Surprised lay readers taking part in the service and everything done in the most reverent manner.

The next two days were taken up in attending a "Sports Day" with football and tug-of-war matches and races and a concert in the Church Army Hall, when the village band and several singers provided a really good entertainment, after which tasteful refreshments were served.

When I saw all this I felt I must tell the old friends of the great McCullagh of Aiyanshi and make their hearts glad to know that the work he had built up so magnificently was still making progress and the sacrifices he had made were far from being in vain. Many of the old names of the natives are still prominent in the work of the church there, Charles Morver, Jonathan Mercer, Arthur Mercer, Michael Bright and many others.

At Greenville

We left Git-lak-damiks on Wednesday afternoon and going with the swift current we were soon down to Lak-Kal-Zap or Greenville as it is now called. We put up in the, at present, vacant mission house, but all being old campaigners, there was no difficulty about lack of beds and scarcity of cooking utensils and cutlery. The next day the natives of this village had prepared for a church service at 11 a.m. in the Church Army Hall, a most comfortable building. This service was a most encouraging one. It was conducted by Samuel McKay and Silas Robinson, mostly in the native language. I only took the sermon which was interpreted by W. E. Collison, the Indian Agent.

After the service we retired to the new town hall, a building ninety feet long and about 40 feet wide with a gallery all around it. Here a sumptuous banquet was provided and speeches delivered by the leading men. Leaving Greenville at 3.30 p.m. we went very rapidly down the river with the swift current and reached Kincolith in the evening. As we neared the village the outstanding thing there was the really magnificent church and as one examined it without and later on within, one's wonder grew that the natives with their own hands under the guidance of one of the greatest missionaries, Archdeacon Collison, had built it. Surely a fine monument to the glory of God and to the memory of that greatly loved missionary whom they still call their father.

The services here were also most inspirational. The clergyman now in charge, Rev. A. J. Wright, read the services and a quite young native interpreted for me in the morning, but in the evening I spoke in English without interpretation for nearly all the natives can understand our language. This church is also lit by electricity. In the afternoon I visited the Church Army where an enthusiastic meeting was being held.

New Mission House

I would greatly have liked to have seen the old mission house which the late Archdeacon had built, a large rambling place which sometimes held under its roof as many as sixteen, or seventeen regular inmates, many of whom were young Indians, who were being trained in civilization and Christian ways. But it had served its purpose and became unfit for use so the Indians had consented to tear it down and build a modern dwelling if the diocese would supply the material for the new building. This had been agreed to and when I visited there, a fine new building stood in the place of the old. Much work has still to be done on the interior but enough has been done to allow Mr. Wright to take up his abode in a part of it and during the summer, when the natives are mostly away at the canneries, he intends to do much of the work himself as indeed he has done a great deal of what has already been done. A very pleasant link with the past is found there in the person of Mrs. McDonald, a daughter of the late Archdeacon who is FREE! This young pure bred registered Jersey cow will be awarded by Farm and Home to the reader solving the simple puzzle below. Costs nothing to try! Lots of fun!

Bossy is a daughter of Black Kid and her official name in the pure bred Jersey records is Black Kid's Daughter, registration number 12045. She was raised as a member of the Bevan herd, Duncan, Vancouver Island. Her sire, Eureka Grand, traces back to Flying Fox, the grand sire of Hampton Pearl Fox. His progeny have been known show animals and in addition a number have qualified for R.O.P. His list of qualified daughters is impressive and convincing. Black Kid Bossy's dam at three years of age had an achievement of 422 pounds of milk and 525 pounds of butter-fat to her credit. Bossy was dropped on May 9, 1919. She is solid color, black tongue and switch. On R.O.P. test as a two-year-old she gave 131 pounds milk and 222 pounds of butter-fat in 244 days. Any farmer would be proud to own this beautiful animal.

The Problem!
LOOK at the cow. All you see are figures—no marks of lines of any kind (the halter is not a figure). Each figure stands a one—ranging from 2 to 9. The problem is now to find the total sum of all these figures. Remember that every figure is one like "23" or "42"—the highest is 9 "42" only the 132's are regarded as several figures to stand together. The top of the 132's are regarded as the bottom of the 13's and all perfect 13's straight. Don't feel doubtful—there is absolutely no trick or illusion, but don't fool yourself into thinking it is as easy as it looks. Get busy and see.

How many pounds of milk will Bossy give?

HOW TO ENTER

Any bona fide resident anywhere in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan or Manitoba, may participate in this contest by making a payment of not less than one dollar nor more than two dollars for subscription to Farm and Home. A contestant may submit as many solutions as desired, provided a payment of not less than one dollar nor more than two dollars is made with each solution. All payments made will be credited on a continuing subscription to Farm and Home, unless other instructions are given. If you send more than one solution at one time use separate envelopes marked with each one. You may order the paper sent to another party if you wish and you have the solution recorded in your name. If you are already a subscriber and your subscription is paid in advance, mark order blank if "renewal" and your subscription date will be extended according to the amount of your payment. Different members of a family may send solutions and have all the payments credited on one subscription. Every one paid with any solution is credited an subscription in the paper, therefore it is impossible for any one to solve anything in this contest. You can't lose, and you may win a big prize. Additional puzzle charts may be obtained at Farm and Home office, or they will be mailed to all who send a self-addressed stamped envelope for them.

$50.00 EXTRA FOR PROMPTNESS!
If you mail your entry with remittance of $2.00 within 10 days of this announcement and you win a prize, we will add $50 to it. This is offered to speed last-minute rush of entries. Don't delay—get busy and see.

Session Prolonged By Opposition.

The session of parliament was prolonged very considerably by the opposition. Members of the Conservative party and some of the Progressives criticized very severely measures or items of supply, including such matters as the vote for the Prince Rupert elevator. It was expected that the House would have adjourned about May 24 but instead of that it will be nearer June 24.

However, it is the privilege of the opposition to criticize and they are to be commended for doing it, up to a certain point. We do not think, though, that such matters as the Prince Rupert elevator were worthy of their censure.

Colonel McMullin Doing Good Work.

Colonel McMullin, head of the Provincial Police Force and formerly of this city is not often heard from but just now he seems to be delivering the goods. He has secured the conviction of two of the worst criminals on the continent and has brought to trial men thought to be connected with the Nanaimo Bank robbery. He has ferreted out the abductors of Wong, the Chinaman, connected with the Janet Smith case, and has made arrests. One important thing has eluded him so far and that is the murderer of Janet Smith. Until he has cleaned up that slur on the good name of the province his work will not be complete. It is to be hoped that quick action will follow. There is a very general impression abroad that some prominent person is being shielded and that makes it all the more desirable that the culprit be brought to justice. It would never do for the impression to go abroad that money could buy immunity in this province.

Liberal Government Forty-three Years.

Nova Scotia has had a Liberal government for 43 years and now an effort is being made to dislodge it. Opposition candidates are nominated in every constituency and in the congested districts there are three cornered fights labor having representatives trying to secure recognition. Election day is on June 25 and the outcome will be eagerly watched by everyone.

It is commonly reported that if Nova Scotia gives the Liberals a good majority, a Dominion election is likely to follow, but there has been no intimation from the government side of the House that an election will be held this year. The contrary has seemed more probable.

Mining News Is Increasingly Important.

Mining development is going on in this part of the country and this paper is making an effort to secure news of the mines. It is realized that much of the prosperity of the northern part of B.C. including Prince Rupert, is due to the mining development of the district and that the future is full of hope in that direction.

Recently a mining man of known ability remarked that billions of dollars' worth of ore would be obtained from the mountains around Portland Canal. Developments each day seem to prove that he is right. Stewart bids fair to become a very prosperous mining camp and Smithers also will benefit largely from the activities in Hudson Bay Mountain and the Babine range. Alice Arm is again being heard from and Hazelton and Usk are spoken of. The possibilities are limitless. Because of that it will be wise for people of this district to keep in close touch with all mining operations and encourage them as much as possible.

Reefs of Debt

THE man or woman who plunges into thoughtless spending, making no provision for the future, faces financial shipwreck on the relentless reefs of debt.

Men in debt no longer control their time or their careers. Others control them. To remain in debt is to have to do without, in bitterness of spirit.

The habit of saving part of every dollar you earn will help to keep you clear of debt, and will enable you to enjoy comfort and contentment in the days that are to come.

Our Budget Book will suggest a savings plan to fit your income. Ask our Manager for a copy.

HER HEADACHES WERE SO BAD SHE COULDN'T DO ANYTHING

Once the head starts to ache and pain you may rest assured that the cause comes from the stomach, liver or bowels, and the cause must be removed before permanent relief may be had.

There is no better remedy for headaches of every description than

as it removes the cause of the headaches in a way that no other remedy will do. Mrs. Wm. Hefard, Lower Steiwacke, N.S., writes:—"I suffered for a long time with my head. It would ache and ache until it made me so sick I could not do anything, but after taking four bottles of B.B.B. I feel that I cannot recommend it too highly to all those suffering from headaches of any kind."

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past 45 years and is recognized by all who have used it to be without an equal as a remedy for headaches; put up only by The T. Millburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
