BLACKWOOD on Bridge

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

"We Missed Six," Says Mr. Muzzy, But Goes Down on Three-Contract!

"We missed six," said Mr. Muzzy, inaccurately, when he had a look at the dummy hand. He then proceeded to go down two at a contract of only three-odd.

This was not easy and requires a bit of explanation. Miss Brash opened her fourth best heart, the seven, and Mr. Muzzy quite properly went up with dummy's queen, which held the trick.

From here on, however, he went completely off the beam. It was clear, even to him, that he had to bring in at least four diamond tricks to make his bid.

At trick two, then, he led the queen of diamonds from the board and went into a long huddle after Mr. Dale promptly played the four.

What were the odds of dropping the king with only two cards of a suit outstanding? Mr. Muzzy couldn't remember. He knew this much he knew that he would be kidded unmercifully if he finessed and lost to a singleton king.

He frowned, stared at the ceiling, pulled his lower lip out of shape. He looked suspiciously at Miss Brash and found out exactly nothing.

He thought about his problem so long that he finally developed the hallucination that if Miss Brash got the lead with the king of diamonds, she could run the rest of her heart suit against him. He had to guess the diamond situation correctly.

So he went up with the ace. "Drop it!" he roared.

Miss Brash dropped it. But "it" turned out to be the lowly trey of clubs. Thus Mr. Dale was able to gain the lead and fire a heart through Mr. Muzzy's king. Miss Brash rattled off five heart tricks to put the contract down two.

Of course, the diamond finesse was automatic. If it lost, Mr. Muzzy still had the hearts stopped and he only needed four diamond tricks anyway.

With vacation time nearing an end, land, air and sea travel this week-end is taxed to capacity.

Canadian Pacific Airlines, which has been pressed for the past week trying to accommodate travellers between here and Vancouver, is adding an extra plane to its service on Sunday in order to clear its list of passengers.

Ernest Morrison of Toronto, store opening supervisor for the F. W. Woolworth Company of Canada, and eight girls who came here from Vancouver and Toronto to help in opening Prince Rupert's new store are among the Sunday passengers.

All planes for today and Saturday are booked solid and CPA officials are hoping the weather-man co-operates in order to complete its trip on schedule.

Helicopter Taxis Forecast
By Air Transport Board Head

OTTAWA (CP)—You should be able to take a helicopter "taxi" between such places as Ottawa and Montreal within 10 years. And by that time you should be able to fly from Vancouver to Toronto in four hours.

These are some of the predictions of John R. Baldwin, chairman of the Air Transport Board, the government body which controls civil aviation in Canada.

In a speech to an Ottawa service club he looked into aviation's crystal ball and predicted that "helicopters" would be running over the 125-mile route from Ottawa to Montreal by 1962, and perhaps earlier than that.

At present, he said, the helicopter is too expensive to compete with other types of transportation in that field. The helicopter has to be made larger and has to be operated more cheaply.

For longer distances, he said a big part of air travel would be done in jet transport planes flying 500 miles an hour or more, at heights of eight or nine miles. Air travel would become cheaper and safer, and people would be able to get tourist-class seats.
