SWORDFISH HAS A REAL BATTLE

Actor Harpooned Monster and Then Fun Began as Seen Tonight

One of the features of the film "Women who give," shown last night at the Westholme and to be repeated tonight was a terrible conflict with a swordfish.

It all came about in this way. Director Barker and his company were aboard a typical fishing schooner busily filming scenes for the screen adaptation of "Cape Cod Folks," when one of the crew sighted an enormous swordfish swimming in the wake of the ship.

Chance for Realism

Immediately Mr. Barker realized that here was an opportunity for exceptionally realistic action, so he ordered Mr. Frazer and a helper into a dory and he followed in another with his cameraman. The actor was told by his director to harpoon the deep sea monster as soon as he got near enough, and then awaited developments.

Now Frazer had never before thrown a harpoon, but after a few minutes talk with his fisherman companion, stood up in the dory and hurled the steel-pointed weapon. Unfortunately, it fell far short of its object. It was not until the third attempt that it ploughed through the tough scales and skin of the swordfish and imbedded itself in the flesh, a signal for a battle royal.

Crazed with pain the giant swordfish hurled itself far out of the water, with its mighty sword flashing in the sunlight, a thing of majestic awfulness, a sight to strike terror into the stoutest of hearts. And then, diving again into the ocean, the fish swam swiftly away from the frail dory and soon some five hundred fathom of line had been let out, all that had been attached to the harpoon, and the small boat was being towed by the swordfish at break-neck speed. But soon he tired and the task of drawing him in began.

Sea Monster Gives Battle

Slowly the line was pulled in until the swordfish was within five fathoms of the dory. It seemed then that for the first time the giant fish became aware of the cause of his agony. Without the slightest warning he dashed for the dory and it was only by the quickest of skilful manoeuvres that the small boat was turned just enough to avoid being cut in two by the razor-like sword. As it was one of the oars was severed as cleanly as if by a buzz saw, and the dory was all but overturned.

Shouting to Frazer to be ready with the gaff and plunge into the fish as soon as he came near them again, the fisherman helper ballasted the small boat and the fight was on again.

Thrashing about in the water now red with its own blood the huge swordfish seemingly bided its time to make another attack. Director Barker was ready to call quits but hated to give up the chance of filming the rest of the thrilling battle. Frazer assured him that he was game to go on, in fact insisted that the camera keep on grinding until either the swordfish had been killed or he and his helper defeated.

Frazer to the Fore

Apparently working itself into a fury, the terror of the deep once again dashed for the little dory. Now it seems that the one and only vulnerable spot by which a swordfish can be killed is the heart, located right under the gills. Frazer had been instructed to aim for this spot with the gaff as the fish came alongside the dory.

Straight at the little boat came the sea monster, the big sword half out of water and reaching several feet in front of his body, much like the cross cut saws used by lumbermen, except that this one swirling through the water had sharp teeth on both sides and was pointed like a rapier.

On came the fish. It struck. Right through the side of the dory went the saw and almost at the same moment into its heart went the gaff from the hands of Frazer. The battle was ended but the swordfish had wrecked the small boat, it quickly filled and Frazer and his helper were in the water. It was only the work of a few moments for Director Barker and the party in his boat to reach the scene and pull the two tired men aboard. It was then discovered that in making its last rush the swordfish had severed two of the fisherman's fingers and slashed a deep cut in the side of Frazer's leg.

NEW CANADIAN NATIONAL COMPANY TO DEVOTE ITSELF TO SETTLEMENT OF COUNTRY AND SELLING LANDS.

uals as seek the aid of its officials will be assured of protection in all their undertakings and a valuable form of welfare for the benefit of those who are new to the country, its habits, customs and practices.

The organization of the new Association is now being proceeded with and within a brief period the Canadian National Land Settlement Association will be functioning with agencies situated at various strategical locations.

Double Purpose

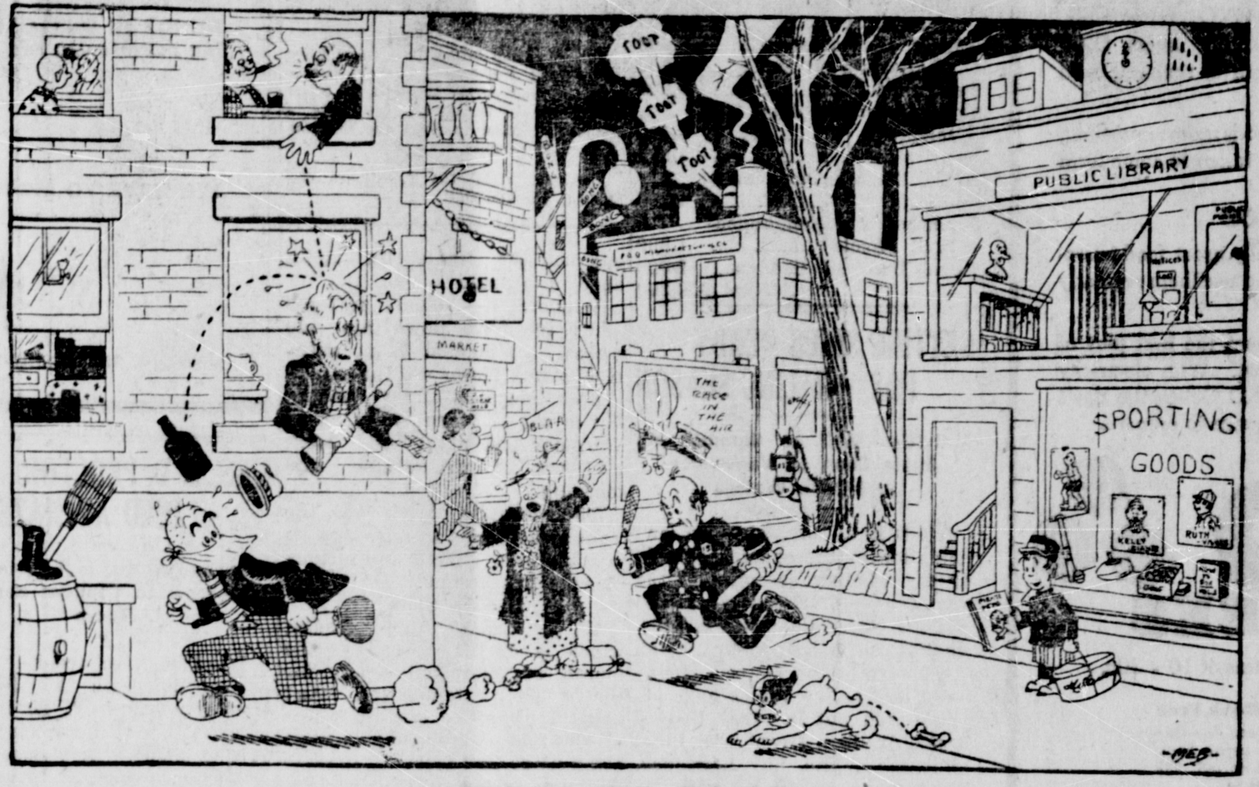
WINNIPEG, March 24.—"The formation of this Association should prove an important step in the settlement of Western Canada," declared E. A. Field, commissioner in charge of the colonization and development department of the Canadian National Railways in Western Canada, "its purpose which is set forth in the charter is to assist, not only the newcomers, who are in search of suitable land but also those owners of improved and unimproved land in Western Canada who are anxious to find purchasers."

The day of free homesteads within fifteen miles of railway lines in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta is done, but there are many splendid areas of improved and unimproved lands for sale at low prices and on easy terms along railway lines, where all the necessary facilities are available for the newcomer and it is proposed to place as many as possible of the new settlers on these lands so that they will have all the advantages of transportation and other facilities from the moment they begin.

"Improved and unimproved lands in the three prairie provinces are held by ourselves, by mortgage and other companies and by private owners, and the new Association will bring the new settler in touch with these. In the case of lands listed with us, they are first inspected by salaried men from our own department and if they are reported on satisfactorily they are then listed with our 150 agents operating in the middle Western States, who are in contact with potential buyers, seeking farms in western Canada. Care is taken also to see that the legal end of the transfer is satisfactory to both parties and also the new comer is to be given whatever assistance he may subsequently need in getting away to a proper start. By this means, the settlement of the next few years will be along already established means of communication and transportation, rather than in unsettled districts where the new farmer might perhaps have to wait for many years before railway and other facilities could reach him," concluded Mr. Field.

$1,000 In Cash Prizes

How Many Objects in This Picture Begin With the Letter "B"?



HOW TO PLAY!

After you read the simple rules, sit down and find all the objects in the picture beginning with the letter "B." A little patience and a few hours' work, with qualifying subscription, may bring you $500 in cash. A very nice little nest egg for someone. If you are not fortunate enough to win the $500, there are fifteen other cash rewards. The one who submits the nearest correct solution gets the first prize; second best, second prize, etc.

Observe These Simple Rules

1. Any man, woman or child resident of British Columbia, except employees of The Vancouver Sun or member of employees' families, may submit a list of names. It costs nothing to try.

2. All answers must be mailed on or before Saturday, April 4, 1925.

3. Only such nouns commencing with "B" as appear in the English Dictionary will be counted. The nouns must be names of some objects seen in the picture. Do not use obsolete words. Do not use hyphenated words. When the plural is used the singular cannot be counted and vice versa. Do not use compound words or words formed by the combination of two or more complete English words, each of which in itself is the name of an object.

4. Words of the same spelling can be used only once, even though used to designate different objects. An object can be named only once. However, any visible part of an object may be also named.

5. You may write your list with ink or typewriter—not pencil. You must, however, only write on one side of the paper and number the words consecutively. Write your full name and address on each page in the upper right-hand corner and on the first sheet. Place the total of words contained in your complete list. Do not write subscriber's name or anything else, except as noted above, on the same paper with list of words. Use a separate sheet. After your answer has been filed no corrections or additions can be made. Type or write the words in columns, not across the page. Leave ample space between.

6. The list having the largest number of correct names of visible objects shown in the picture beginning with letter "B", according to the judges solution list, with the least or fewer number of errors, will be awarded First Prize. The second largest list, with the least or fewest number of errors, will be awarded Second Prize, and so on through the list until all prizes have been awarded. Mis-spelled words will be counted as errors. The prizes will be decided and awarded on percentage basis, and in case of a tie, neatness and accuracy will determine the winner.

7. Workers may co-operate in answering the Puzzle, but only one prize will be awarded to one household or to any other group where two or more people have been working together.

8. Do not send renewal subscriptions as new. Half of your subscriptions must be new to qualify for highest award.

9. A NEW subscription is one who is not receiving The Vancouver Sun by mail or carrier on the day this announcement is made—March 8, 1925. A change of delivery address or a change of name covering subscriptions already being delivered will not constitute a new subscription. Changing from Morning to Evening or from Evening to Morning does not constitute a new subscription. All subscriptions are payable in advance. See table on subscription rates.

10. New subscriptions may be sent by mail and can be paid for at the mail rate to addresses on R.F.D. Routes to rural districts and to towns outside Greater Vancouver. New subscriptions for addresses in Greater Vancouver must be paid at the carrier delivery rate and cannot be sent by mail.

11. All answers will receive the same consideration regardless of whether subscription for The Vancouver Sun is sent in or not.

12. Three or more able and well-known residents of British Columbia will act as judges and decide the winners. They will use Webster's New International Dictionary in making their decision. All participants in sending in their list thereby agree to accept the decision of the judges as final and conclusive. The judges will meet as soon after the close of the contest as convenient, and announcement of the correct list and names of prize-winners will be published as soon thereafter as possible.
