Likely A Boom In Lumber Business.

Following the action of the Legislature in making a more permanent and equitable schedule of royalties for the lumbermen at its last session, it seems as if there would be a boom in the lumber business. A number of deals have recently been put through and it is announced that a big new mill is to be erected on the Fraser River to cut logs from Vancouver Island.

In the north F. L. Buckley is to operate his Port Clements mill to cut airplane spruce for Vickers and the mill at Prince Rupert is to open soon. Other mills will be operating before long.

Great Demand For Airplanes.

There is a growing demand for airplanes and airplane spruce. Information coming through at various times and from various sources tells of the growth of the airplane industry. War planes and peace planes are needed and British Columbia is supplying the necessary timber. This district is the centre of the airplane spruce industry.

Congratulate Presbyterians On Their New Church.

The members of the Presbyterian Church are to be heartily congratulated on their new church building. It is a fine structure and would do credit to a much larger city than this. It indicates that church people here are alive to their needs and proud of their religion, else they would not spend so much money on a building.

Dr. Grant is to be particularly congratulated on the event as it is largely owing to his able and earnest ministrations that the building of the new church has been possible. It is to be hoped that he will be able to use it for many years to come.

The building is an excellent one architecturally and mechanically and the architect and builders both have congratulations coming to them for their good work. The builders are a local firm and it is pleasing to know that they can do work of this kind.

Far Away Fields Look Green.

Far away fields always look green. We always seem to think strangers can do things better than we can do them ourselves. The result is that we do not appreciate their excellencies. As a matter of fact Prince Rupert people rank in ability with the best people in the world and are able to compete with the world in many lines of work.

There are often times when we have to send away for things or when we have to get outside people to do certain kinds of special work but ordinarily Prince Rupert people can do most classes of work as well as anyone.

Fine Thing To See Unity Among Christians.

Yesterday at the Presbyterian Church was an object lesson in unity among Christians. Among those taking part in the opening of the new church was Rev. G. G. Hacker, a Methodist, in the morning, and in the evening Rev. Archdeacon Rix, Anglican. In the congregation were people of all religious denominations, including a number of Catholics.

The aims of all religious denominations are practically the same. The chief difference is that while some point more particularly to the life hereafter as the reward or punishment for sin, others see the reward in virtue itself and punishment in this world more than in the life to come. All profess to have the betterment of life here as among their chief objects.

Insofar as religion has to do with improvement here, it is a matter of interest to all citizens. When it goes beyond that it is of interest only to those in agreement with the particular cult or sect which sets it forth. Everyone is agreed that life here might be a great deal better than it is today and if religion can aid in making it better, everybody is for religion. Therein lies the common ground for agreement among all denominations of Christianity and all other religions of the world.

Much Gambling On Food Of People.

There is a great deal of gambling on the people's food supply. Thousands of people made fortunes by buying wheat at the right time in anticipation of a rise and others have lost when there was a drop. The rise was accentuated by the vigorous buying of speculators, and the people pay the extra cost in increased price of wheat products.

MIXED EMOTIONS IN SIDE SHOW OF LIFE

Clown to General and Back Again is the History of the Hero

"The Side Show of Life" is a screenplay of fundamental human emotion and human suffering, sacrifice and love. Life itself is a mixture of laughter and tears!

"The Mountebank" by William J. Locke is the story from which the picture was adapted. It deals with the adventures of a circus clown who becomes a general during the war, falls in love with a titled English lady only to come to the bitter realization, when the war is over, that once a clown, always a clown! In a series of heart-tugging situations a powerful climax is reached, and from this point on the picture marches on to a happy and triumphant finish.

There are lavish sets and curious backgrounds and dramatic content of the story. With it all Ernest Torrence's impressive portrayal of the lovable clown dominates the picture. It is a role that affords a wider dramatic scope than anything he has done before. Torrence has a chance to be a real hero himself and the way he does it makes you love him. He is not only funny but human and tender and that is a hard combination to beat.

Anne Q. Nilsson is an ideal type for the aristocratic heroine. Miss Nilsson has a featured role with Torrence in the production. Louise Lagrange, Maurice Cannon, Katherine Lee and others prominent on both stage and screen appear in support.

season in the screen version of "The Man Who Came Back" which opens Friday next here.

John Fleming Wilson wrote the novel which became a best seller immediately. Jules Eckert Goodman made it into a play which won Broadway and then the whole country. Now, Edmund Goulding has written a scenario from which Emmett Flynn has directed a picture which promises to duplicate the success of the book and stage versions.

The story concerns the black-sheep son of a wealthy New Yorker. The youngster burns up Broadway and when it becomes too hot for him, is sent to San Francisco by his father to work in a ship yard. In the Golden Gate City he is shan-

The Great Breathable Remedy

Dep's

FOR COUGHS, SORE THROAT,
COLDS & BRONCHITIS

A S you dissolve a Peps tablet on your tongue, certain healing fumes are released which are immediately taken with the breath down into the furthest recess of the lungs where liquid medicines cannot penetrate. These Peps fumes on their way bathe the whole of the breathing passages with their healing potency, soothing the throat, allaying inflammation in the bronchi, and relieving the chest. Liquid medicines are simply swallowed into the stomach and cannot act in this direct Peps way.

White Peps are an expensive remedy to produce, the demand has become so great that it has now been found possible to have the ghashed and eventually lands in the Orient.

The fall and rise of Henry Potter, the reckless devil-may-care American, weaves itself into a narrative so romantic and full of action that it might have been originally written for the screen. Needless to say, he does rise. But not until he has experienced the sting of defeat and the degradation of the underdog. He also learns the extent of a woman's sacrifice. And in the end, Henry Potter turns out to be a first rater in the real sense of the phrase.

THE FAST SET IS ALL ITS NAME IMPLIES

Betty Compson is the Wife Who is Led Away by "The Great Lover"

Do authors become so involved in their world of fiction that they fail to keep in touch with the persons about them? Do they pour all their romance into book form and have none left for their own wives?

In "The Fast Set," William de Mille's latest Paramount picture at the midweek showing, Elliott Dexter appears in a role which gives support to the contention that to an author a manuscript is more real than life itself.

In an opening scene Dexter is shown dusting cigar ashes from his manuscript with his wife's silk scarf. It symbolizes his blindness for the charms of his wife, the role played with fine touches by Betty Compson.

When a philanderer playfully touches the scarf, however, the author becomes indignant. The presence of "the great lover," a role in which Adolphe Menjou is ideally cast, arouses the novelist out of his work of make-believe into the realm of actualities.

The philanderer's attentions anger the novelist, and he finally plays a trump card to win back the woman he loves; he invites a social outcast to sit with his wife and friends at a dinner party.

In "The Fast Set" the producer-director and the scenarist have introduced many delightful touches similar to the use of the scarf. The script of the screen play is considered one of the finest of its kind—telling in deft pictorial form a dramatic story which relied upon brilliant dialogue in its stage form.
