GIRLS WINNERS AT BASKETBALL

Boys Lost But Enjoyed Visit to Anyox at Week End

The girls beaming with victory and the boys not downhearted although they lost both games, the local High School basketball teams returned on the Cardena this afternoon from their trip to Anyox. They were loud in their appreciation of the splendid reception they were given at the smelter town and, incidentally, at Stewart where they spent several hours last evening.

The Prince Rupert girls won the first game from Anyox by 17 to 14 and the second by 14 to 12. Both were keenly contested affairs.

The Rupert boys lost the first game by 38 to 23. The second boys' match was, however, the most thrilling affair of the trip. At the end of the regular time, the two teams were tied, 29 to 29. They played five minutes overtime and were again tied 33 to 33. The second extra, five-minute period gave the Anyox boys victory by 45 to 35. As a result of this series, the Anyox and Prince Rupert boys' teams are tied as far as the season's honors are concerned for the local boys won both games from Anyox at Christmas.

Entertainment

The Anyox hosts certainly went out of their way to entertain the Rupert visitors and made their stay in the smelter town a pleasant one long to be remembered. On Friday night there was a banquet, on Saturday the local young people were taken through the mine and smelter, on Saturday night there was a party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wenerstrom and on Sunday a band concert was staged for the entertainment of the local visitors. There was an enthusiastic send-off when the teams sailed for home yesterday morning.

At Stewart last night, W. J. Crawford, having been informed that the local youngsters were coming, had teams at the wharf to meet them and they were driven around Stewart and also to Hyder so their trip was marked with a visit to real Alaskan soil. Later last evening, there was a dance in King Edward Hotel at Stewart in honor of the visitors. The affair was arranged by Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Crawford and Jimmie McAleenan, owner of the hotel, extended himself as a host.

FINAL TOURNAMENT OF BADMINTON CLUB

Decision to Hold Competitions in Men's Singles, Ladies' Singles and Mixed Doubles

At a meeting of the executive of the Prince Rupert Badminton Club it was decided to hold a final championship tournament. There will be a prize for the winner of the men's singles, ladies' singles and mixed doubles the doubles to be handicapped. The doubles will be played on March 22 and the finals in the singles on April 5, the elimination games to be played at any time by arrangement. A committee to have charge of the tournaments is to consist of A. H. Carmichael, Bob Bartlett, Alex. Rix and Miss R. R. Scott.

The executive decided to continue the season to April 15 and possibly longer, an extension beyond April 15 to be decided upon later and depending upon the interest taken by members and the state of the club exchequer.

Invitations were received from Terrace and Hazelton clubs extending to the members of the local club the privileges of their courts.

THE LETTER "D"

"Why is the letter "D" like a ring?" asked the young lady of her lover. The gentleman gave it up. "Because," added the lady, with a modest look at the picture at the other end of the room, "we cannot be wed without it."

HOW TO PLAY FOOTBALL

Style and Skill Necessary in Passing the Ball ---Speedy Attacks

(By "Andy" Ducat, Manager of Fulham Club.)
(Reprinted from "Greenock Herald")

So much has been said about combination in football that sometimes one begins to fear that it must be a game for machines. Skill and style in individual players, however, count for as much as ever. Good passing is especially needed.

Many players—particularly of the sensitive type—pass too much. They are not afraid of their opponents but of their own men. They don't want to be called "selfish." Schoolboys particularly are inclined to fear comments passed by spectators and others.

Passing—and this fact is not sufficiently understood—is only one way of producing a desirable result. Passes are not desirable in themselves. You are out to get the ball through. You may do it by personal dribbling or by team passing. If there is no reason for passing you should not pass. You should certainly stick to the ball when your other men are too closely marked to do better than you with it. Your job is to get the ball through. Let people shout "Pass!" as much as they like. If a pass seems a good idea to you at the time, then pass. If it doesn't, then don't.

You may, of course, be too confident. You may be in the habit of thinking you can do it alone when a little help is what you need. Your captain is the man to decide this.

Neat passing is very stylish. I have seen two men run a ball right down, tapping it backwards and forwards as they ran. Neither captured the ball. They just passed.

Forward Passing Pays

Everybody must pass. When the defence is good you need to pass constantly. The ball is best passed forward. That is, you should kick it ahead so that your companion can secure it without pausing in his run. This is the skill in passing.

Still more scientific is choosing a moment to pass so that you can shoot the ball behind the defender. Your own man is then relieved of the necessity of beating him.

You have both passed the ball and outwitted the defence.

Sometimes you can pass so that you kick clean through the defence, and still ensure that your own man is the only one with a real chance of getting to the ball first. Everything depends on the defence. When the defenders are all muddled up and over the place, these forward passes can be brought off frequently.

You see, therefore, that passing is not so much tapping the ball to your man as kicking it to a place where he can reach it.

"Square" passes — as shots straight across to your man are called—are so very obvious that young players need constant coaching before they can be made to realise the value of forward passes at various acute angles.

Better Than Dribbling

Speed is nine-tenths of the attack. Men advance much more quickly without the ball than with it. Even the cleverest dribbling is necessarily slower work than short passing. Amateur teams are not always trained to play the short-passing game. That is why I warned you about too much passing.

If your team is definitely advancing on the short-passing plan, however, you cannot have too much passing.

The idea here is that each player only touches the ball once. There is no dribbling and very little individual work. Spectators are justified when this style of game is in progress in shouting "Pass!" to a forward who sticks to the ball. Even then, I would recommend a good player who sees a clear opening in front of him to take the ball ahead alone. A bit of good personal work is not likely to hurt the plan of attack.

Many centre forwards play a pretty game of dribbling the ball straight up to the opposing centre half and suddenly, as they reach him, tapping the ball square to the right or left. Usually, at the same time, they move round their man in the opposite direction to that in which they passed the ball. These deceptive passes are very puzzling to the defence. The trouble is that absolute accuracy is essential. Accuracy only comes after more practice than many amateur teams can get.

Swinging Out Shots

I believe that the game of long passes and individual dribbling pays amateur teams best. Amateur half backs nearly always are inclined to crowd in round their centre when defending. They don't spread out to the extreme wings in the way I have recommended. When there is a bunch of half backs in the middle of the field—as therefore there so frequently is in amateur matches—a good centre forward can always open up the game with a swinging forward pass right across to his extreme wing man.

This game is so much easier to play than the short-passing game, too. It must be remembered that short passing was invented to outwit too well-organized defenders.

Your team will very seldom meet defenders who are too well organized to permit long passes. That is why I recommend you to play the long passing game which does not demand the machine-like accuracy of the more professional style.

The trouble with long passes is that they leave the extreme wing men isolated. Your winger gets the ball down and may fail in swinging it across in front of the goal mouth. You should adopt the "W" formation. Your centre runs towards goal, taking care to keep behind the ball. Your inside man runs up between the winger and the centre and some yards behind both.

Having got the ball down, the wing man is not now compelled to swing it right across. He can tap it forward, his inside man can run up so that he takes the ball ahead of the centre forward; then the inside man can either shoot or complete the centring process, according to the position of the defenders.
