Camp Opening at
Breaker Bay Near Thurston
Harbor by Kelly

is expected that the sawmill at Queen Charlotte City, which was recently acquired by Vancouver interests, will be selling in about a month's time.

This is the word brought from the Islands by the steamer Prince John this afternoon. The vessel brought up a quantity of machinery and equipment which is to be installed in the plant. Another timber development on the Islands is the opening up of new logging camp at Breaker Bay near Thurston Harbor by T. A. Kelly Co. which is already operating camps at Lockett and Logan Inlet, Thurston Harbor and Gunniswha. The most of the logs from the Kelly camps are rafted to Powell River while some find their way to Puget Sound.

The John took a quantity of E. Buckley's machinery from Buckley Bay to Port Clements where the Airplane Spruce mill is to be reconditioned. Preparations are understood to be under way for the early reopening of the Buckley Bay mill.

Canadian Migration to States Falls off One Third during Six Months just past Senator says

WASHINGTON, Mar. 3.—(By Canadian Press).—Recent utterances of Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, a prominent member of the Senate Immigration Committee, on the workings of the immigration law for the first six months of its enforcement, make it plain that no important changes in that law are probable in the near future. At least, Senator Reed made it plain he is opposed to overhauling the law. He believes it is working well and in what he said he reflected views of a number of other senators whose influence for the present at least will be against changes.

No quota law with respect to Canada is needed, according to Senator Reed because there has been a sharp falling off in immigration from there. Senator Reed, referring to Canada and Newfoundland, said:

"The law provides that a native-born citizen of Canada or Newfoundland may come in outside of the quota. In the last year—that is, the year ending June 30, last—under the old law, under which they were outside of the quota, we got in 200,000 and we lost only 2,000, showing a net gain of 198,000 Canadians. That has fallen off, through causes which I do not wholly understand, having nothing to do with the immigration law, because they are still free to come; that has fallen off, so that in the first six months under the new law our gain was only 64,000. I do not regard that as a problem. Even if they do come in at the rate of 422,000 Canadians a year, that means native-born Canadians; and it means people who in almost every respect are indistinguishable from ourselves."

Tide Ebbs

"As we look at the figures over the last 25 years we find that the same phenomenon has occurred before. Great numbers of them come in for two or three years, usually years of prosperity here, and then the tide ebbs and the balance is the other way, some Americans going to Canada. So that does not seem to me to be a problem in any sense."

"On the other hand, in return for this neighborly attitude we show to Canada, Canada allows us to place at her ports, like Halifax, Montreal and Vancouver, our immigration inspectors, and the immigrants who come through those Canadian ports are examined by American officials as to their suitability for coming into the United States. It is an entirely satisfactory arrangement. It works very well and the examination is very rigid. I find that about 5,600 immigrants coming to the United States were examined in those six months in Canadian ports instead of American ports. As a matter of fact, it is practically impossible to prevent their coming across the border if they get into Canada, even if we try to do it. We have a long land border which is difficult to guard, and it is much better, from our standpoint, to examine the immigrants before they get into Canada and let them cross at will than that imaginary line that it is to provide a Canadian quota, which is an unneighbourly thing, anyway and is practically impossible to apply."

He added that whatever the cause, Canadian immigration has fallen off about one-third as against last fiscal year.
