No Such Thing As A Canadian.

There is no such thing as a Canadian in the eyes of the $4,200. law when registering a child. The parents have to give its racial origin. Canada is not old enough to have developed a race.

There are in this country cases, where an Irishman of which had cost slightly over $2,-French descent has married a Scottish woman whose mother 500, while the expenses in rewas German. They have gone to the registry office and have placing fire losses were also been slightly puzzled to know what race to call the child. Yet heavy. they were debarred from calling it Canadian.

It seems to us about time that the word "Canadian" ought hoped to get revenue the same to be good enough for anyone and no questions asked beyond as in 1924, and they should make that. If the person registering is not Canadian, then it is all both ends meet and a little better right to ferret out the ancestry. Canadians here should insist by judicious management.
