TRAINING FOR FOOTBALLImportance of Goal-keeper is Emphasized and Pointers Given Making Saves

(By "Andy" Ducat, Manager of Fulham Club.)

(Reprinted from "Greenock Herald")

Years ago I played in a village team. One of our muster was not a born footballer. Rather the reverse. After one fatal error our enraged captain turned to this unfortunate and shouted vindictively "Next match, young 'Enry, you're going to keep goal!"

This attitude towards the goal keeper still persists in small teams. A man not strong enough for strenuous work in the field is put back between the posts.

Yet the margin of victory in first-class matches works out at one goal. Because of this, the goal keeper is one of the most influential men on the field. He only has to keep out two balls that should properly have gone through, and he reverses the result of the match.

The tallest man on your side might well be trained for work in goal. Strength, however, must go with his height. A strong punch or a long goal kick at critical times make a vast difference to the state of the game. Activity in "diving" and jumping is needed. Ability for concentrating on the game must be accompanied by a complete freedom from "nerves."

Goal kicks must never be left to the backs. They have enough to do without taking on the goalies' responsibilities. Hard kicking out takes more out of a man than no end of running.

You cannot decide a goal keeper's merit by the brilliant saves he makes. A first class goal keeper depends for success on putting himself into positions that make brilliant dives unnecessary. Some of the finest goal keepers rarely seem to do anything sensational at all. Spectators are not always so good as they think they are at picking out the best goal keepers. Give me a man who saves the goal before it is kicked rather than one who springs—as they do in story books—up into the top left-hand corner and retrieves a dazzling ball.

They stand rigidly in a "let-me-like-a-soldier-fall" attitude. This is very bad. Stiff standing stops your getting quickly to the ball. Should the ball hit you, painful consequences ensue.

Whichever part of your body receives the impact must give just as a cricketer's hands give when he brings off a catch.

Wait with all your weight thrown forward. Stand reasonably flat on your feet, but thrust your weight forward as though you were standing on tip-toe. Bend your knees. A bent pair of knees enable you to spring in the air or "get down in the basement" without an instant's hesitation.

fore he retires. It is pretty well understood, however, that, if Dempsey really does retire, Tommy Gibbons will lay claim to his mantle. Whether Gibbons is or is not entitled to the belt is a question upon which fans are divided and it is not expected, if he does get it without warfare, that he will hold it long without fighting.

George Goulding, the Vancouver walker, who has announced his permanent retirement following his collapse in New York recently, just went to the well once to often. Goulding at 40 is not the physically equipped specimen he was in 1912 when he established world's records which have since stood all tests. Physicians examined Goulding and warned him not to compete. He intends therefore, he says, to rest in bed for two or three days then star for Vancouver again via Toronto. He should be back on the coast in about a fortnight's time. Goulding is a member of the Vancouver Gyro Club.
