Verdict of Not Guilty in Case Against Claude Vincent Symes in the Assize Court Yesterday

The jury at the Supreme Court Assizes yesterday afternoon returned a verdict of "not guilty" in the case of Rex vs. Claude Vincent Symes who was charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Norma Munro who was run down by a motor car driven by him on February 12 last. The jury, which returned to the court room at 4:30, was in retirement exactly one hour. When W. H. Derry, foreman of the jury, announced the verdict to the court, Attorney General Manson, who had conducted the prosecution, asked that the jury be polled. Each juror exercised the responsibility of care and caution devolving upon him. Personally he could not believe that the driver had fulfilled that responsibility and at length he went into the evidence to support his contention.

His Lordship, in his charge, while warning the jury that it was up to them to form their own conclusions from the evidence regardless of what he might say, impressed upon them that it was their responsibility if they decided that the driver was not liable in this matter.

Personally he did not think that the driver had taken due precaution as he approached the scene of the accident though this might not have applied at the actual time of the accident. This was an important point. Had he taken all the care that he should have? He had seen the child in front of him at a considerable distance. Did he bring the car under the control that was warranted by the child's tender years?

Motorist's Duty

Mr. Manson's address was one of the most eloquent that has ever been delivered to a jury in Prince Rupert by a crown prosecutor. It was not bitter but it was clear. He put the situation mainly before the jury. If they desired to make the law governing the use of the streets by children the responsibility was theirs—just as much as it was that of the judge or the crown. It was their function to decide whether the driver in this case

ONE YEAR FOR USING AN AXE

Arthur Stewart, Essington Indian Guilty of Wounding With Intent to Harm

Guilty of wounding David Douglas with intent to do grievous bodily harm, accompanied by a recommendation for mercy, was the verdict of the jury this afternoon in the case of Rex vs. Arthur Stewart at the Supreme Court Assizes, Mr. Justice W. A. Macdonald passed a sentence of one year at Okalla Prison Farm, stating that he felt this was a very light sentence.

The jury was out about one hour, returning to the courtroom shortly before two o'clock.

This case concluded the present docket and His Lordship again reminded the jurors that the court was only adjourned until August 19 and that their services would be again required then in connection with the Liard River Indian murder cases.
