Power To Amend Her Constitution.

The proposal was made in the Legislature that Parliament should ask for power to amend her own constitution instead of going to the British Parliament to secure changes whenever they are needed. That power, it seems, is contained in the constitutions of the South African and Australian commonwealths and the Irish Free State because they insisted it should be there. In Canada it was the leader of the French Canadians, Hon. Ernest Lapointe, who defended the present system. French Canadians have often been spoken of as half hearted in regard to the British connection but it was an Ontario Conservative who made the proposal to cut one of the links of the present binding chain.

At present about the only rights of Britain in the Dominion are the right to constitutional amendment the hearing of appeals to the Privy Council and the other rather necessary right of appointing the Governor General. All other ties are sentimental. There have been agitations often against the right of appeal, but that was largely because of the custom of employers taking appeals over compensation to the highest possible court. Today the provinces have compensation boards which handle those cases and that has done away with many appeals.

No Objection To Amending Constitution.

We see no objection to amending the Canadian Constitution to give Canadians the right to make their own future amendments if they see fit, as long as it is not made too easy to amend it. We do not want a condition where a bare majority could at any time make change without mature consideration. The present method of securing the consent of the Dominion and of each of the provinces is difficult enough.

In Canada there does not seem to be good reason for consulting the provinces as is done in the United States. Here the provinces surrendered all their rights to the Dominion and were given back at confederation certain specific rights. In the U.S. the states have the sovereign right and must be consulted.

No Protection Yet For B.C. Ports.

So far as the despatches indicate there is no protection yet provided in the ship subsidy bill for British Columbia ports. If the rates on the Atlantic are reduced without a corresponding reduction of rates through the Panama Canal, we are then paying our competitors to undercut us. Possibly we are not fully informed yet in regard to this matter, but we must not allow any discrimination against ourselves without a vigorous protest. The ship subsidy may or may not be a correct method of procedure but it must be extended to include Pacific ports if it is adopted on the Atlantic.

Senate Vote Face Hard To Explain.

The Canadian Senate is changing its attitude toward the liquor regulations asked by the Canadian government. Twice before have those regulations been turned down by the Senate after they passed the House of Commons but now, it is announced in despatches, the Senate is shifting its ground and members will vote for the measure or refrain from voting and allow it to pass.

More than that it is announced that B.C. senators are going after the exporters and will demand that the measure to prevent private importations be extended to include exporters with a view to putting the bonded liquor warehouses at Vancouver and Prince Rupert and at other points out of business.

The curious thing is that the Senate should suddenly see the light at this late date. Through their refusal to allow legislation to pass at previous sessions they brought discredit upon those who were trying to enforce the law in this province but now that they have succeeded in their efforts and brought about a change in the British Columbia law, they suddenly turn around and say they will vote for what they previously opposed. Mysteries are the ways of senators.

To Insurance Beneficiaries

Hundreds of thousands of dollars are lost annually through the unwise investment or careless spending of monies received for insurance death claims and matured endowments. A Union Bank Savings Account is the proper place for the deposit of such monies. The funds will then be in safe keeping and earning interest for the beneficiaries.

Dome Mountain Mines Located Twenty Miles East of Telkwa Were Recently Closed Down

Fifth of Series of Articles on Mining in Bulkley Valley, based on Smithers Board of Trade Report.

Twenty to twenty-five miles east from Telkwa, and reached by road and trail from that point, lies another section of the Babine Range—that of Dome Mountain. Here, unlike other parts of the range, the mineral wealth so far discovered is not in silver, lead and copper, but chiefly in gold. The ore bodies are found in quartz-filled veins, of which a number have been found on the mountain. These vary from a few inches in width up to many feet and are remarkable in their great length. In places some very high grade ore has been found, but the most promising feature is probably the fact that there have now been proven several very large bodies of ore running between $20 and $30 per ton. Although some of the veins show good values in silver, in lead, in copper, in zinc, yet the greatest value in nearly all cases is in gold.

Though locations were made here many years ago, progress in development work was not very marked until 1922 when Thomas Jefferson took under option nearly all the claims then located on Dome Mountain. Backed by New York capital he carried on active work throughout that season, opening up various showings. Results proved most satisfactory and in consequence all of these properties were purchased at the beginning of 1923 by the Federal Mining & Smelting Company. By them a new company—the Dome Mountain Gold Mining Company, Limited—was incorporated to take over and develop the claims. A very active program was carried on during that year and the early part of 1924. Camps were constructed, power plant and compressor installed, shafts sunk, tunnels driven to prove up the ore bodies, and trial shipments of ore were sent out.

Many Staked There

The outcome of this activity was to arouse the interest of other parties, and during 1923 scores of new stakings were made in all directions from the company's holdings. Harry Howson, the Chisholm brothers, the Carr brothers and others located claims on Dome mountain at this time. With some of these the Dome Mountain Gold Mining Company Limited negotiated for the purchase of their interests, but apparently the demands of the owners were not acceptable to the company and no deals were made.

In June, 1924, simultaneously with the closing down of the other operations controlled by the Federal Mining Company in this part of British Columbia, all work was shut down. Announcement was made by the company that the showings had not opened up satisfactorily under the work done. Later in the year the company went to the expense of obtaining crown grants for all its holdings—thirty-four claims. This would suggest that perhaps there are reasons for the closure other than that announced publicly. Of the "stamped" locations made in 1923 many have now been abandoned by the locators.

The Man in the Moon SAYS:-

HURRAH, boys, the fish is coming, the elevator's building and the mill is getting ready to operate!

It was thought that it was some of the old gang that had started knocking, but it was later found to be nothing but the report of the blacksmith's convention at Winnipeg coming in over the radio.

JAKE says you want lots of punch at a prize fight or at a dance.

THE Ottawa Citizen is getting its funny column on the front page and here I am stuck in any old place. What I need is gall like the other fellows have.

THE swallows 'll be here soon. This announcement has nothing to do with the issuing of beer licenses.

If I'd a million dollars
And could live a million lives
I'd still remain in Rupert
Where everybody strives.

If I'd a million doughnuts
Around a million holes
I'd want a million stomachs
And a million buttered rolls.

If I'd a million evenings
And a million girls to see
I think there'd be a million
Who'd be in love with me.

POWER LINE TO ELEVATOR SITE

City Has Started Work on Connection at Westview as Asked for by C. D. Howe & Co.

The city has started the installation of a temporary power line to the elevator site west of Morse Creek, work having commenced yesterday. Connection is being made from the city's regular line near the corner of Graham and Allen Avenues. This, being built in response to a request recently made by C. D. Howe & Co., will provide power needed during the construction of the elevator. The permanent line for the operation of the elevator will be put in later.

The city is also about to give the elevator a water connection. A six-inch main will be installed.

Ten Years Ago in Prince Rupert

February 20, 1915.

One of the pioneer missionaries of the north coast in the person of Rev. R. H. Gurd died at his home in Metlakalla last evening. He is survived by a widow, three sons and a daughter.

News comes from Seattle of a thrilling experience of a former Prince Rupert girl in that city. When a maniac entered the office in which she was employed and shot the manager dead, Miss Vera Lockhart, sister of Mrs. Charles Youngman, leaped from a second-storey window into the street.

War activities proving a handicap to the shipping of Swedish lumber, buyers are looking in this direction and it is possible there may be a good deal of activity in this particular district.

"Absolutely Unequaled"

"When my little girl badly burnt her foot," writes Mrs. C. W. Kirkham, of South Avenue, Wilkesburg, "Zam-Buk healed perfectly, leaving no trace of the sore whatever. In a bad case of ulcers Zam-Buk was equally good, also for boils and skin eruptions. Just recently for soothing and healing our cold-sores and chilblains Zam-Buk has proved absolutely unequalled."
