MANAGER OF THE PIRATES

Bill McKechnie, Product of Sandlot, Brought Pittsburgh Through Successfully

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 1.— Bill McKechnie, a third baseman of parts in his day and a native of Pittsburgh, has attained a national league pennant after approximately three seasons as a manager.

McKechnie is a product of the sandlots and a much travelled ball player. His life has been entangled with several of baseball's squabbles. Early life found him playing third for the Butler and Washington teams in his home state and in 1907 he was purchased by the Pirates, making his first appearance in the majors at about the time Heinie Zimmerman crooked up at second base for the Chicago Cubs. Babe Adams also made his bow that season.

In 1908 McKechnie was transferred to Canton, O., and a year later appeared with Wheeling where he played remarkably and was adjudged the best man at his position in the Central League. In 1910 he rejoined the Pirates and played very little, the same holding for 1911 when the presence of Jack Miller, Bobby Byrne and Hans Wagner prevented any aspirant from breaking into the infield.

Many Changes

St. Paul received him in 1912 and in 1913 the Braves drafted him. He played only one game in Boston and drifted to the New York Americans. Once again he went to St. Paul on August 22, 1913, to play alongside a youthful shortstop who was destined to create records in the majors—Everett Scott, of the Red Sox and Yankees, and now with the team that will fight McKechnie's band in the world series, the Senators.

The next year the present pirate manager was among several who jumped to the Federal League. He proved to be one of the organization's greatest infielders with Indianapolis. That year he batted .305. In 1915 the team was transferred to Newark and McKechnie succeeded Bill Phillips as manager and won the pennant.

Went to Giants

Another season saw the collapse of the Federals and for a time McKechnie was out of work. He finally went to the Giants in a settlement which Harry Sinclair handled. In New York he played brilliantly but the Giants lost eight straight battles, only to swing through the West for the first time and capture every game, with the mauling bat of their third baseman working overtime.

Returning to the Polo Grounds last evening two teams—Prince Rupert Billiard Parlor and Great War Veterans—were entered in the first division and in the second division four were entered—Cold Storage, Great War Veterans, Prince Rupert Billiard Parlor and Grotto. In view of the fact that further entries are expected it was decided to extend the time for entering until next Tuesday when the schedule for the season will be drawn up, play starting soon thereafter.

In the absence of Secretary J. F. Hutchinson, Dick Howe acted participated in every game. He as secretary at the meeting last left baseball in 1919 to enter night and Bert Morgan was in business. The call of the diamond chair. The delegates were: George Waugh, Billiard Parlor; Fred Pyle; Cold Storage, Jack May; Grotto, Bert Morgan.

SPORT CHAT

Johnny Rawlings, one of his legs broken in his never ending efforts to carry his team to the front, will view the coming World Series' battles from the grandstand. The Pirates owe much to the little second baseman who arose to great heights in the crucial series in New York which saw the Giants collapse for the first time in five years. His fielding was sensational, his batting timely, and well it might be, for it was on that same baseball field in New York, the Polo Grounds, that Johnny Rawlings was recognized as the greatest player of the World's Series of 1921. Little Johnny was a member of the Giant forces then, even at that time a veteran whom the Brave had cast adrift. With Boston he failed to scintillate for there was little opportunity for starring in such a club as the Braves produced after the halcyon days of 1914. But his time came and he took full advantage of it. His bat and fielding were big factors in the first Giant victory over the Yankees.

Rawlings might be well termed a money player, for it has been in the crucial moments that he has risen to his best. He will be missed when the Pirates go into the World's Series, although Eddie Moore, now scheduled for the position, is a capable fielder and heavy hitter. Johnny was injured at Forbes Field while sliding in a base, only a few weeks ago. In the morning he had been at the Oakmont Country Club, a fan himself before the golf prowess of the national amateur champion, Bobby Jones. Rawlings obtained his degree in law at Leeland Stanford University before entering professional baseball. He was born in Bloomfield, Iowa, in 1892, but makes his home in California.
