Elections Are On And Now For The Fray.

The elections are on and it will be the duty of the people of Canada calmly and dispassionately to choose the very best men, actuated by the highest principles and pledged to the very best policy to represent them. Three matters have to be considered, quality, aim and policy. The men must be men who can be depended upon to represent the people. They must be men of stamina and courage who are ready at all times to carry out the policy for which they are elected. Also the men sent should be men who have lofty aims and ambitions. And last but not least they should be pledged to do the bidding of the electorate.

Independence is a good thing often but in a representative at Ottawa what is needed is a man who will obey the behests of the party that elects him. He must be a representative.

Western Party Would Be Great Mistake.

There is talk of a movement to form a western party composed of Liberals and Progressives. This party would unite in trying to secure for the west those things which they want, such as lower tariffs.

Any movement which sets east against west would be harmful to the west. The west lacks population and can be voted down at any time if the East unites against them. To line up in that manner would be fatal. It would tend to destroy the Canadian national spirit which is being slowly but steadily fostered in this country.

What we want is to unite parties or groups on matters of general policy and not group them according to location. Quebec has voted strongly Liberal for a number of years but it was not always so and it will not be always so. Changes will come. Ontario is very largely Conservative, yet there was a Liberal Premier in Quebec for many years.

Location is a small matter. We all have our local needs and we all feel at times as if we are neglected. That is true of every place because there must be times when we think we ought to get things we do not receive. The way to get any wrong-righted is to secure the support of reasonable people in the east. When the Prince Rupert elevator was decided upon, it was the East that voted for it, else we should still have been without it. Many of the French-Canadians of Quebec supported the expenditure. So it is all the time. If we are to be a nation we must try to avoid sectionalism such as that proposed for the prairie country.

Schools Open Tuesday Next.

The public schools open on Tuesday next and most parents are making arrangements for their children to be there at the opening so that no time may be lost. That is the right method. The schools belong to us and we should use them to the fullest possible extent. We can make them very successful or by carelessness we can interfere a great deal with the work. Any pupil kept away disturbs the general work of the class and holds back the others.

Last year the loggers of Gardner Canal opened a school for a few children and paid a teacher. Most of the young folks had to go by boat but they did not miss although the weather was often bad. Every pupil made a perfect attendance for the year. It was a record and yet it is pretty safe to say that no school in the province worked under such disadvantages as did that one.

Parsee Member Of British Commons.

The Victoria Colonist says Shapurji Saklatvala is a member of the British House of Commons. The member who bears this curiously un-British name represents Battersea, a district which is in the habit of selecting representatives whose ideas of government are progressive to the verge of revolution. The British people are tolerant of races and of racial ideas. If they were not this Parsee with an unpronounceable and almost unspellable name would either be bundled out of the country without ceremony or tumbled into jail in a hurry.

The Red incendiary has declared in a public speech that he is "out for a revolution," and has warned the authorities to be prepared for cold steel, for they will have to face it. He says he hates the Union Jack and is going to the United States. The chances are that he will not be admitted to the United States. There are no chances at all that if he talks in the United States as he has been talking in Great Britain he will be jailed in the twinkling of an eye and deportation awaits him. Denouncing the Union Jack will not save him.

TERRACE TEACHERS RETURN TO SCHOOL

Building Adjoining to Be Renovated for Night School Classroom

TERRACE, Sept. 5.—Mr. Griffin, public school principal, and Mrs. Griffin are expected home this week end after having spent their holidays in the southern part of the province. They are moving into the home recently vacated by Mr. and Mrs. Joe Thomasson.

Miss Grace Andrews, Miss Mayme Dobb are each returning to their respective rooms in the public school, while Miss Mallett will have charge of the room Miss Glover had last year.

The building at the school known as the "Teacherage", and which has been the home of the school principal for some years, is being renovated and converted into a classroom to be used for high school work during the coming year.

The Man in the Moon SAYS:

THE Starbeam man says that women have a lot to put up with but they don't have to bother about keeping their trousers creased.

SOME of those young men must be rolling stones else they would gather more moss on their lips.

THE skipper always bawls out members of the crew who displease him. I suppose I'm the crew and my wife's the skipper.

A contemporary insinuates that a Scot would see a joke quickly enough if he was sure it was not at his own expense.

ONE beauty of the local boys' band is that the lads do not learn to blow their own trumpets.

The Dodo Skull

I'm only the skull of a dodo—
 A bird about which poets write—
 I was found in the depths of the ocean
 Where everything's dark as the night.

I once was a living creation
 And held the brain works of a bird;
 But now I'm a skull, dead, whitened
 And many folks think I'm absurd.

I was raked from the depths by Ted Shruballs,
 When fishing the halibut banks.
 My bill it is long and no item is wrong,
 So forgive me my odd little pranks.

WHY take a vacation when there are such funny things to see walking around the streets? Frinstance, I saw a man yesterday and he sure made me laugh. He looked just like one of Scoop's monkeys.

IT'S about six months now since despatches from Paris have been staving that bobbed hair is passing away, and yet I do not notice any of the local girls deserting the barbers.

PERHAPS you may have heard of the single man who doubles up with laughter when he remembers that he is not married.

CURIOUS BIRDLIKE SKULL IS CAUSE OF MUCH SPECULATION

Thought to Be Too Large for a Bird, But Much Like One

The skull which has caused so much speculation on the waterfront and which has been presented by Ted Shruballs to the Museum, and which has been humorously referred to as that of the extinct dodo, was picked up by H. & R. six miles off shore near Tow Hill, just where the tides of Beale Strait and Dixon Entrance meet. It measures seven inches across from eye to eye and the total length including the bill is 11 1/2 inches, of which the bill is 6 1/2 inches. At its widest part the bill is three inches across and is rather thick and bony. The under part of the bill is missing.

A Massett Indian who saw it says it is the head of a species of seal that used to be seen in those waters but which is now extinct. Others say they could not imagine a seal with a head like the one in question. It is thought too large for a bird.

Four years ago a similar skull was picked up by some fishermen, but what became of it is not known. The head looks much like that of a bird, but the bill, while shaped much like a bird's bill, is of bony structure, much thicker and heavier than the ordinary bird's bill. All who have seen the skull express surprise but so far no one has been able to identify it. It will be put with the museum collection in the Bank of Commerce building early in the week and may be seen there. In the meantime it is at the Daily News office.
